

Linemen, Cook and Conover. Time keepers, Doolittle and Green. Manager Tukey telegraphed this morning for Voss and McKillip to meet the team at Tarkio Monday. The men are badly used up as a consequence of yesterdays game.

It is probable that Nebraska never before played a game in which the men were so exhausted and worn out as in the one yesterday. The team has made a record that every loyal Nebraskan should be proud of.

JOHN A. KEES.

The Kansas City Star had the following to say in regard to the Nebraska team:

Captain Brew and Westover, the Nebraska tacklers, were almost invincible, and they played havoc with the Medics' interference and mass formations, and forced Captain Toland to use his backs almost altogether for carrying the ball. Pillsbury succeeded Brew when his old injuries forced him to retire, and proved an able substitute."

"One man, the smallest in stature on the Nebraska team, loomed up above all the rest when it came to playing football. That one was Crandall, the 140 pound halfback, and too much cannot be said in his praise. He was the one reliable ground gainer on the eleven, outclassing the other backs despite his physical handicap, and he also played a star part in preventing the doctors from scoring. Three different times, when fakes proved successful, he was the only Nebraskan between a fleet footed Medic and the goal, yet each time he got his man with a hard, low tackle."

"The weak spots in Nebraska's line were the right guard, Emmons, and the left end, Ryan, and practically all the Kansas City team's gains were made either over or around those two players. Morley and Toland's straight bucks were too much for Emmons, especially as he was playing against Fisher, the best of the Medics' center trio. As for Ryan, he was drawn in on play after play and fake after fake, and never did learn to wait until he was sure of the whereabouts of the pigskin. Morley circled him once in the first half for a twenty-five yard run, and Lewis did the same trick in the second, while Porter and Grady each worked him on the delayed pass trick, the one for thirty-five yards and the other for forty."

SECOND TEAM DEFEATS GENOA INDIANS.

While the First University eleven and the Kansas City Medics were fighting for supremacy in Kansas City, the second eleven entertained a fair sized crowd on the campus by defeating the Genoa Indians in a very pretty and spirited game. The score was 11 to 0.

A fair sized crowd witnessed the game dividing their attention between the game on the field and the reports from Kansas City furnished by the Nebraskan-Hesperian on the east steps of the main building. These reports were furnished every ten or fifteen minutes and were greeted by hearty applause from the spectators.

The work of the scrub team was gilt edged and they demonstrated their ability to play in a manner which was not at all unlike the work of the first eleven. Both the team work and the individual playing was perfect. Fumbling was the order of the day, the ball changing hands mostly on that account. Time and again, however, the scrubs held the red skins for three downs and blocked their favorite and most effectual play which was placing guard and tackle over and trying for end runs.

The Indians played a remarkably clean and swift game considering the fact that they have had very little practice and their tackling was as fine as was ever witnessed, on the campus. Captain Mitchell played an exceptionally strong game for the Indians. He is an ex-Carlisle man and is coaching the Genoa team this year. His kicking was superb missing a difficult goal from field by a slight margin and making some very long distant punts which prevented the scrubs from piling up a larger score. The playing of the backs, Porter and Day, was also good.

For the scrubs Eager and McKillip were easily the stars. Many times Eager skirted around the end for good gains of five to twenty-five yards. Voss and Whiteman played their usual strong game, while Johnson at left end played an exceptional strong one, permitting no gains around his end and often tackling for a loss. The details are omitted for lack of space.

SHAKESPEARE: ARTIST AND MAN.

The Macmillan Company the large book publishers of New York and London announce among their new publications this new contribution to Shakespeare Literature by Dr. L. A. Sherman.

It is said that Professor Sherman in this new volume, exhibits Shakespeare's art by an examination of certain characteristic plays, and traces out the ideas and ideals that have respectively inspired them. From these ideas the real character of Shakespeare is inferred and estimated. What is known of his life and dramatic career is then discussed systematically and fully.

Many people are diffident of their ability to read Shakespeare, being hindered from the vital meanings by the form. This book is intended to furnish such aid as is practicable in an introduction to Shakespeare. It is left to the reader to do his own discerning, and so far as possible his own work. There is a chapter upon Shakespeare's principles of dramatization, and their application to the other forms of literary construction. Outlines and analyses of special plays are added in an appendix.

Women are writing and talking about Grace Marguerite Hurd's story The Bennett Twins. The twins—brother and sister—kick over the traces in rather a happy way; and with the reluctant acquiescence of their guardians. Their experiences in New York are full of fun and heroic work—his as an art student, her's as a singer. They live in a ram-shackle old studio building, go through sore straits before the year is out. They starve and wear out their shoes, but they never lose courage and withal never lose their sense of humor. Miss Hurd seems to have found a field not touched by Miss Alcott or Miss Whitney, yet fully as interesting and wholesome. The book ends as it there might be a love story to follow as a result of the twins experiment.

Dr. Hastings next Sunday. Were you at the meeting Sunday? Mr. F. L. Vasey's solo was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

"Drifting," the subject of Dr. Rowland's talk to about seventy-five students, was replete with wholesome thoughts and practical advice.

The outlook for a splendid year's work was never better.

Do not forget the noon day prayer meeting.

Remember the Sunday afternoon meetings are held in Palladian hall at 4 o'clock.

Every Young Woman who attends the university is given a special invitation to visit our Coak and Suit department. We promise to show all who come the choicest collection of good values in stylish, well made, ready-to-wear garments ever displayed in Lincoln. Come and see for yourself.
