

—The State Teachers' Association meets Wednesday, March 28th, and continues in session three days. The meeting promises to be of more than ordinary interest. Some very important questions are to be discussed.

—A number of University students recently visited the Penitentiary and came away well pleased with the general appearance and management of the prison. The officers of the Penitentiary treated them very courteously.

—The faculty recently decided that no meetings of any kind should be held in the University after eleven o'clock P. M. This is sufficiently late to remain out at night, and, if the societies desire to have long sessions, let them commence in season.

—Quite a number of students who heretofore had not placed their name on our subscription list, have done so recently. We hope all others will do the same. Show your appreciation of our efforts to publish a creditable magazine by subscribing.

—As we go to press, examinations for the present term are under way. Of course some will fail to pass the requisite examinations. But from our own observation, we would judge that the general class standing of the students will equal that of other terms.

—A. Harbut has clothing and furnishing goods reduced to the lowest prices possible. Students and all others will do well to patronize him. Clothing store, No. 12, O Street, south side, between 10th and 11th. Give him a call and see what can be done.

—We notice that the reading room is better patronized of late; in fact ever since the music room was removed to the room opposite. Quite a number of the young men are now very regular in their visits to the reading room. A great stimulus seems to be given to read when sweet musical accents, from charming voices break the monotony of the scene.

—The Palladian Society has a very large membership at the present time and the members are doing excellent work. A large number of ladies attached themselves to the society during the last term and are taking an active part in the work of the society.

—J. C. F. McKesson, now teaching in Stanton county, deserves no little credit for the interest which he has taken in the STUDENT. He has recently sent us quite a number of subscriptions, for which we feel grateful. John will return to the University next fall.

—That young Soph will probably not be so devoted to society interests hereafter, as to keep his girl away from home until a late hour at night. He thinks it is no little discomfiture to face an affrighted family, and especially the father, just ready to institute a search for them.

—The Palladian Society had a very spirited contest on the occasion of the election of officers for the ensuing term. We could but admire the tact and discipline displayed by one of the parties in the contest. If the other party had used the same tactics, the result might, possibly, have been changed.

—We observe that Leighton & Brown, corner O and 11th street, have on hand a large assortment of miscellaneous books. They have the works of the most popular poets, and the greatest novelists. The latest scientific works will be found on their shelves. Those desiring to buy books had better give them a call.

—The University Union at a recent meeting decided to petition the Board of Regents to furnish them a larger hall. A committee was appointed to bring the motion properly before the board. This society certainly needs a more commodious hall and we hope the Board will grant the request of the University Union.

—And now comes the Thayer Co. Sentinel with a notice that it will put a blue X on the paper of every subscriber in arrears. There seems to be no little efficacy
