

pared to give lessons in drawing and painting. Also paints oil portraits from sittings or photographs. Studio on third floor east wing.

—We have at this office, a beautiful lithograph copy of a family record, suitable for framing. We offer this for sale cheap. It is large enough to last two ordinary persons a life-time. Any young man who is hoping to ever make use of such a document will do well to call on us before purchasing elsewhere.

—Mr. E. Hallett of this city, has kindly tendered the University the use of a large eight-day clock, which now occupies a prominent place near the entrance of the building. It is a correct, convenient time-piece, and an article long needed in this institution. Mr. Hallett deserves many thanks for this act of kindness.

—Two families living in the neighborhood of the University, each own a dog, and the canines are named respectively "Cicero" and "Apollo." Another family in the same locality are going to purchase a dog and call him "Rome." When that time comes, we intend to quietly load up our musket and drop around and make Rome howl.

—A young student has been detected in telling some very wicked stories to his father. It seems that he has been making the old gentleman believe that his class was kept in till nearly 1 o'clock. An investigation of the matter showed that such was not the case, and that the dutiful son wasn't in his class at all. That boy will be a policeman yet, if he lives.

—Somebody is evidently getting rich by appropriating personal property of the students. Scarcely a day passes by that the Chancellor does not announce in chapel the loss of an umbrella, a book or a hat, or some article or another. What becomes of all this missing property we can hardly surmise, but it is our opinion that somebody is laying a stock of goods in order to open out a second-hand store.

—The Library has received some valuable additions in the shape of handsome new books, which now adorn the shelves. The reading room has been fitted up, and is now a cosy place for a student to spend a spare hour. Mr. Geo. McLean, the Janitor, has spared no pains to make the room comfortable and cheerful. By exercising great care, he has succeeded in preserving a choice collection of house plants, that makes the room doubly attractive.

—"I have been thinking of a very serious question for some time," said a young man to his fair companion, as they were returning from the sociable. "Well really—I don't know—I think you had better ask—" was the confused reply. "I was only thinking," he continued, apparently not noticing her confusion, "whether I had better study algebra this term, or not." There was a marked silence during the remainder of the journey homeward.

—A Shakesperian Club has been organized in the University, with a view to "obtain a more thorough knowledge of the works of the greatest of modern dramatists." The following officers have been elected for this term: President, H. H. Wilson; Vice President, Miss Hall; Treasurer, C. E. Stratton; Secretary, Miss Emma Parks. This is a good move, and will be productive of much improvement to those who are carrying the work forward.

—It was the evening of the sociable, and they were enjoying a promenade. He thought perhaps that the atmosphere of the hall was too chilly, but yet he would like the walk and talk continued. As they passed the space where cloaks and wrappings were hanging, he suggested that an overcoat might feel quite comfortable. "Yes," she said, "I believe that I should feel better if I had a pair of sleeves around my shoulders." They passed on, and our reporter heard no more.

—One would naturally suppose that when a student approaches the completion of his course, he would feel enlarged and inclined to spread himself, as it were.
