

—This term the students are displaying their oratorical powers before Professor Woodberry, by declaiming in the chapel. This is something that has been needed a long time, and every student will do well to avail himself of this opportunity for the rhetorical improvement.

—One of the students, who is opposed to female suffrage, was arguing last term with his chum, when he broke out in this strain: "What would become of us poor men, if the women were allowed to vote, and one were to be elected President of the United States! We have an example right here in the Palladian Society."

—It has been suggested that the music room be located in the cupola. Distance lends enchantment, you know, and then, climbing half a dozen flights of stairs will use up some of the surplus breath, and moderate the sounds that now sweep through the halls like a roaring tornado, to something like the gentle melody of a steamboat whistle.

—At the last meeting of the Entre Nous club, the following officers were elected for this term:

J. O. Sturdevant,	President.
C. C. Chase,	1st Vice President.
J. M. Knox,	2nd Vice President.
S. E. Babcock,	Secretary.
D. H. Wheeler,	Treasurer.
B. G. Tzschuck,	Sergeant-at-Arms.

—We understand that some of the boys, in order to prevent the fearful pangs which a previous engagement brings, have devised a new plan, viz: they assemble in a secret place, and, by drawing slips of paper with the young ladies' names on them, each one's fate is told. Now, boys, this is a first-rate plan, but you don't want to let the girls find you out.

—The Palladian society has taken effective measures for repairing their hall. Funds sufficient have been raised to kalso mine the hall, and put up new chandeliers for gas jets. Prof. Stadter will place over the rostrum, in glowing letters, the old motto, "Forma mentis aeterna est." When this is done, Palladian Hall will be, one of the finest society halls in the State.

—The following verse, with a picture representing the scene, was found lately:

"Four little children went to skate
Upon a summer's day,
It so fell out they all fell in,
The rest they ran away."

—MOTHER GOOSE.

Parties unknown; but if the artist will call at the sanctum and give further particulars he will oblige us very much.

—There are a great many of the students who are not subscribers to the HESPERIAN. This should not be. Every student should feel that he has some interest in the paper, and should take pride in its support. The paper is published by the students, not by any party, and is therefore the common property of all. Don't depend on borrowing your chum's paper to read; but send us your sub. and read your own paper.

—The Regents have donated thirty dollars to the University Union to fit up a new hall. This is something that the Society has needed for a long time, as the room they have been occupying will only accommodate a small audience, and is not well adapted for speaking in. The Room is neatly kalsomined, and Prof. Stadter will paint the new motto, "There is room at the top," and do other ornamental work. This nicely furnished hall, with the pleasant exercises, will make an agreeable place to spend your Friday evenings.

—A student who was making a hasty retreat through an alley, where a clothes-line chanced to be stretched, was suddenly stopped in his mad career. The first thing that drew his attention was the rope caught in his half opened mouth. Student not being able to halt, the rope slipped and caught under his nose. At this he lost his equilibrium, his feet flew into the air, his nose hold gave way, and Student came down on his back. Lady and little girl standing on door step smiled, as he picked himself up and walked away as if nothing had happened.
