

THOMPSON Bros. have fitted up their elegant ice cream parlors for oyster rooms and students of a gastronomic turn of mind can obtain specimens of Mollusk bivalve family done in the highest style known to the Epicurean art.

We hear the tread of number nines,
Of seniors yet to be,
Promenading in ragged lines,
Along with Lieut. D.
Marching over the flower beds,
Their onward course pursuing,
Yells "What the d—l'r you doing?"

THE Sophomores have a class organization. One by one our school is adopting aristocratic notions. Class organization may be an instrument for benefit and pleasure, if not allowed to produce excesses and rivalries such as disgrace some eastern Colleges.

The map peddler's bronzed and brazen countenances, upon which an impudent smirk has calloused to the bone, present such an appearance of depravity that one wishes the man who first made a map had been flayed alive and the map drawn in his blood on his dried skin and handed down as a warning to future imitators of his work of woe.

AMONG the attractions in Fall and Winter Clothing, S. Schwab, No. 6 O. St. seems to hold out the best inducements. His Stock is bewilderingly large, cut and fit of garments faultless, and prices lower than ever known before. You also find there a fine assortment of Hats, Gloves, and complete assortment of Men's Furnishing goods. Try him.

THE cadets have recruited ranks and organized themselves into a company with the following officers: D. H. Mercer, Captain; C. E. Stratton, First Lieut.; S. D. Cox, Second Lieutenant; Frank Parks, First Sergeant; R. A. Weston, Second Sergeant; B. C. Arnold, Third Sergeant; B. B. Davis, Fourth Sergeant; C. C. Chase, First Corporal; D. H. Wheeler, Second Corporal; A. C. Wicks, Third Corporal; W. O. Riddle, Fourth Corporal.

THE Literary Union gave one of their very pleasant socials Friday evening, September 28. On account of the Fair and its attendant bustle the attendance was not as large as customary, but a sufficient number were present to make it agreeable. Splendid refreshments were served during the evening, and the only draw back was that the faculty obliged dispersal at 10 o'clock.

PROF. Dalton has organized a class in elocution. We hope every student in the University will embrace this opportunity for improving his delivery, and make a desperate effort to secure for himself that very desirable quality.—"Action, utterance and the power of speech to move men's souls"— Prof. Dalton's charges are moderate and the members of his class are highly pleased with his method of instruction.

THE students are about forming a Lecture Bureau. A number of prominent speakers in the State have signified a willingness to lecture for us and this is the way to have them do so. Mr. G. M. Lambertson will deliver the opening lecture upon the subject Conversation.

Mr. Lambertson is a fine and fluent speaker and thinker, and any thing from him will be a treat that will long be remembered.

THE Palladians are going to have a social and one prominent feature of the evening will be the voting of a prize cake to the best looking young lady of the evening. This will be immense. So, girls, get out your curl-papers and boys save all your nickles for each one will buy a vote for your girl. The proceeds will go towards buying a new organ for the society.

Pools are open in this office and you who think you can name the lucky girl walk up.

ONE of the Seniors was showing a new comer through the building and seeking to impress him with a proper idea of the dignity of the University, said—"I suppose you know that this is a very learned
