

Through the kindness of "one who was there," we are enabled to give a programme of the Sophomore feed Halloween night. The following is the full text:

HALLOWEEN TRAGEDY.

Boisterous music,

SCENE III. —Police court

"Well officer what did you bring this company here for?" "Yer honor, for disturbance of the peace," *

* * * * *

"What'll ma say." Plaintive music.

Benediction.

It is a melancholly fact that the girls foreheads are lower than usual this season and the high priestess of bangs declares that they will be two inches below the eyes before Christmas. Long may they hang.

Exchange Bric-a-Brac.

Volante has a "Daisy" editor; her name is Springer —Daisy M.

Rounds Printers' Cabinet, a very fine specimen of typographical work, is on our table. Come again.

John G. Whittier, who is trustee of Brown University is in favor of making the institution co-educational.—Ex.

We advise Brown to try it on. Having once done that they will find, as do the boys here, that they can't do without it

There are 32,000 students in the colleges of the United States. Out of 22,000 students in the German Universities 7,000 are American.

Mrs. I. D. Evans, nee Miss Williams, formerly a student of the University, is now editing the Sutton Register, and in a very capable way.

The Academic, by the way, though a high school journal, has but a few superiors among our exchanges. Its motto is "free speech and plenty to eat."

The first number of Vol. II of the Hastings College Review is here. It is small, but promises to grow soon. With nine editors it ought to make a good stagger at enlarging.

The Occidental Mirror is the finely printed and edited representative of Colorado College, but somehow the blank last page and the cold, gray appearance of the covers sends a funeral shudder through us.

No. 1 Vol. XII, of the Hesperian Student, reached our sanctum, containing its usual stock of good editorials. The Student has the most formidable exchange editor among our exchanges, and more than one of our unlucky contemporaries have felt the point of his prolific pen.—The Academic.

The Chaddock should import a little "horse sense" into its personal columns. The idea that the public is at all interested in the fact that Misses Jones and Smith are "doing good work in Natural Philosophy," is nonsense. We advise the Personal man of the Chaddock to use less slush and Sunday School talk, and more of vim and energy.

Medical Minglings.

A med must turn his work aside,
 Though sore against his will,
 On the HESPERIAN to slide
 His unaccustomed quill;

And while we look for little thanks
 And never hope for pay,
 We would not use loquacious pranks
 In what we have to say.

But if our minglings appear
 Uncouth in kind or dress,
 We'll try to better, or with cheer,
 Will contribute the less.

Averse to vying with the sons
 Who bursting bubbles prize,
 We would evolve no pretty puns.
 We never "advertise."

We find a broad expanding field
 In medical affairs,
 And need no other one to yield
 A stock of dally cares.

Our study, not the works of men!
 'Tis nothing less than man!
 Go, find it, all creation, then,
 A higher if you can.

Six ladies grace the medical class.

Some of the medical students having gone, thirty eight remain.

A class of students better pleased with instructions received would be hard to find.

A good degree of cordiality exists among the medical students of the three distinct schools.

Indigent patients are skillfully and gratuitously treated before the class. Several persons have thus received important surgical and other treatment. Any person may come before the class for examination.
