

viding E. M. F. be one second and internal resistance equal to R A plus T S into the square root of 1. The size of the North Pole from the measurements of one coulomb of the borealis. (4) The external resistance from the shoeing of a mule with a horseshoe magnet.

The Freshmen in history will be expected to (1) Trace the ancestry of Romulus and Remus back to a primitive gens, and show how their quarrel grew out of the religious isolation of the early Greeks. (2) Discuss the Roman Empire, from the expedition against Troy to the battle of Waterloo, giving causes, and dates where possible. (3) Give full text of the Agrarian and Sempronian laws, with the proposed amendments by Cato, and follow their effect down to the present condition of Irish peasantry. (4) Explain the true import of Cæsar's words when he said "I'm sick sen' fer McGinnis;" what relation to the revolt among the Goths, and how did it affect the treaty of Berlin? (5) If you have time, give chronological list of kings, consuls, tribunes, Emperors, senators and justices of the peace down to the sack of Rome by the Prussians.

In Trigonometry the Freshmen will (1) Reproduce table of Logarithms. (2) Give the sine of the Anglo Mania. (3) Compute size of triangle if one side is equal to the seven-years war, one angle equal to the electrical-chemical equivalent of H₂ O S O₄ and the other angle two inches across.

But we have space for no more. Weary sojourner in this vale of tears, if you wish more light and more lists, call at this office and be supplied. Southeast corner of University basement, three steps down. Knock hard.

HEARD IN THE HALLS.

Miss Nettie Taylor is teaching the youngsters out near Roca.

E. D. Howe left school on the 8th inst, to attend the funera of a relative. He will resume his college work next term as usual.

We suggest to the Seniors that by putting their ring on wheels and tying a string to it they could make it more manageable.

Mr. W. L. Arnold, a former student, and now a prominent and influential citizen of Ashland, spent a few days in the city visiting friends last week.

We understand that the renowned Schubert Quartette of Chicago will appear in Lincoln some time in the near future. This opportunity of hearing them should not be missed by any one who is a lover of good music.

Private advices from San Francisco enable us to state that Mr. Ed. Unangst passed a very creditable examination on his admission to the bar, and that his prospects for a brilliant future in his profession are bright.

The June classes have all been selected and have gone into training, preparatory to bombarding the defenseless people of Lincoln for three successive nights. If the city passes safely over this crisis in her history we shall pronounce her invulnerable.

East stairs—group of students—Eddy, Storrs, Misses Bonnell, Griffith etc.—great noise of talking; laboratory—students engaged in study—students get mad—sulphuretted hydrogen—keyhole—forcible language—invectives—adjournment sine die.

S. D. Killen, one of the managers of last year's rope act returned to the University last week. Long experience with the trials of a country school teacher has made him a little more stern and dignified, but otherwise he is the same old Killen.

Brilliant Student: (in Zoology) Prof. what fishes have their eyes closer together than others?" Prof. meditates and replies: "Well, I don't recall just now. Can you tell?" B. S. "Certainly; the smallest ones." Disastrous consequences followed.

Tutor White took the Junior Physics class through the city electric light works last Thursday, thus giving them a valuable practical lesson in Electricity. Mr. White's thorough knowledge of his subject has made this unusually dry study extraordinarily interesting this term.

Regent Mallalieu reports the Reform School as flourishing, and says that they will be able to send a student to the University in the fall. We can report an institution more prosperous, for if we are not over sanguine it will have a few students ready for the Reform by the opening of its next session.

Mr. Lobingier stand up! It is asserted upon pretty good authority that last Friday noon as you were going to dinner you—well you got your face washed, and then you—the fact is, we would like to have a conversation with you at our private office. Don't fail to call before you make another break like the one in question.

The Philodiceans are no longer afraid of fire, for they now have a ready and efficient Babcock fire-extinguisher. This will be placed behind Brown and Miss Daley, in the future, to prevent the spread of a conflagration, should one break out. (The editor of this column has gone away on a visit and won't return till next term.)

The Hard Time Social held at the Congregational Church last Wednesday evening was not extensively patronized by the students. As patched clothing was the only requisite for admission, no one in Lincoln could have attended with as little trouble as the students. We cannot understand why so many failed to embrace such an opportunity to pass a pleasant evening.

The Juniors, who officiated at the christening of the Philodicean Seniors, insist that the name they gave on that occasion was "Uli" instead of "Eli" as a rattle-brained reporter got it in our last issue. THE HESPERIAN professes to be entirely neutral in this grave controversy, but it is inclined to think that "Uli" is not too hard a name for a class that will select such a ring as the one now worn by '86.

Not far from the convent lives a man who is perhaps the maddest man in this country or Missouri. In an unguarded moment he rented two rooms of his residence to three University co-eds and has been engaged in repenting this step quite constantly ever since. We met him going to the depot the other day under the escort of two doctors who had advised him to go to Omaha and get a night's sleep.

We have authentic information that Luke Cheney was the recipient of one half dozen solid silver table spoons on his last birthday. Now of course this is all right, but as fellow students anxious for the welfare of each other, and we would call for an explanation of the significance of such a gift. Rise, Luke, and explain and we will be first to extend to you our hearty congratulations or sympathy as the case may be.

The Sophomores have elected the following class officers: President, Kleine Polk; Vice-President, Flora Baker; Secretary, Paul Heffleman; Historian, Jared Smith. The last class meeting of the term was held last Saturday evening at the home of Miss Manley. The Seniors did not molest them, as on a previous occasion, and they passed the evening in a profitable manner. They all have a feeling of sadness, as they remember that they will soon be Juniors, when, according to the time-honored custom, they can hold but one meeting during each term.
