

Bowman recently spent an enjoyable afternoon examining the treasures in Miller's picture gallery. His description of the same are quite unipue.

It seems too bad for a student to attempt petit larceny, but it looks like that is what Steve was doing with the wrong hat, when he came out of Brown's.

On account of the shortness of the spring vacation, a large number of students did not go home, but remained to watch the progress of the appropriation bill.

On account of a slight illness just preceeding the close of last term, and which interfered considerably with his work, Tinker has decided not to graduate this year.

The students who attended the public session of the Orphelian society Friday night, March 22, at the Wesleyan, had the pleasure of listening to a really excellent program.

Fifer, our editor-in chief, spent his recess out on the B. & M. He ran in over Sunday, and took a review or two Monday morning and was off again for the rest of the week.

The seniors of '84 all entered into a solemn compact to get married within a year. We mention this for the perusal of the class of '89, who seem to be in a quandary about what to do.

Those students who stole club cat No. 2,—no, we mean club No. 2 cat, are warned that detectives are upon their track, and if they wish to avoid publicity they had better return the cat.

There is a prep who calls paying his laundry bill, "Rendering the necessary pecuniary emolument for my proximity to divine similitude." He has evidently heard that cleanliness is next to godliness.

It has leaked out that John Green and Newcomer have been quietly training, and will fight to a finish in the basement of Grant Memorial hall, April 1st. Odds are five to three in favor of old John.

A number of the "yaps" spent the recess in town, and employed a part of their time recuperating their wind power in anticipation of April 12. The same remark is also applicable to a part of the cadet band.

Editor-in-chief.—Say, Mac did you read about that college editor being tarred and feathered down in Texas last week? Mac.—No, what was that for? Editor-in-chief.—He was a local rustler and didn't get in any copy.

Sitting in one corner of his room a few days after the appearance of "Prodromous Essentialium etc., he cleared his throat, glanced over towards his desk in another part of the room, blushed furiously and finally spat upon the floor.

It is practically an assured fact that one of the attractions of commencement week will be class day on which occasion something rich may be expected. By the way, we understand that the senior invitations will be something novel in these parts.

The cadet band is fast becoming the wealthiest organization in the University. Besides playing regularly at the skating rink, they are in their harvest—the city elections. They have several engagements with aspiring politicians this week.

The question of having printed catalogues of the library has been mentioned regularly by THE HESPERIAN at least once a year for the last ten years. We think, as our predecessors have thought, that it would be a great convenience and help if this could be accomplished in some way. At least there ought to be some way in which a student could find out what there is in the library. If this were done the use of the library by the students would be doubled in a short time.

Our friend, we will not mention his name, who rooms with Farmer, after desperate efforts which lasted through several days, succeeded in securing a pass and started for home the middle of the week to spend the recess, what was left of it.

Students seem to take naturally to politics. No election passes without several of the boys holding down positions on the election board. We notice that Manley and Tinker will officiate as clerks of election in the fifth and sixth wards respectively.

In the appropriation bill there is an item of ten dollars for a speaking tube from the chancellor's office to THE HESPERIAN office. It will save the chancellor many steps, although we doubt if it will as efficient an order preserver as might be desired.

That joint program scheme received a black eye from the Palladians. Consequently, the probabilities are that we shall have four society programs during commencement week. Another probability is that they will be held in the chapel, instead of the opera house, as heretofore.

When school begins the boys will find the streets adjacent to the campus, which are being graded for paving, thick with hoboes. We advise all not to ask them foolish questions, as ye local is acquainted with the breed and knows that it is no respecter of polished shoes, and would just as soon knock a man down or skin him at poker as not.

THE HESPERIAN tenders to Mr. Walter B. Graham its most sincere apologies for the omission of his doings from its last issue. Owing to an oversight of the gentlemanly typos the account of his flirtation for March was left out of the editorial columns. This is stated in justice to Mr. Graham, in order that the reading public may not think he has fallen in the good graces of the editorial force of this paper.

O. B. Polk made a short visit to Lincoln last week and showed himself at THE HESPERIAN. He and Grosse are thinking of hanging out their shingle at Plattsmouth. We predict for the young law firm a successful career. Kleine's forte will be pleading. We have heard him deliver a temperance lecture astride of a rail, and make his audience cry. He can tell a dog story and make a dog laugh. We know of no jury that could withstand his eloquence. Grosse will be better at distinguishing obscure legal points and fine differences of right and wrong. Before leaving for Plattsmouth Kleine was admitted to the supreme court bar.

Mr. W. W. Robertson, who has for several weeks been a member of the city staff of the Journal, leaves this evening for Sidney, Cheyenne county, to take the position of editor of the Sidney Telegraph. This is one of the very best country papers in the state of Nebraska, and a place at its head is one of considerable profit and influence. Mr. Robertson has been admirably trained for the new place, in the University, in the Journal news room, and on the reportorial staff of this paper. Mr. Chas. Callahan, the proprietor of the paper, will give his entire time to managing its business affairs and his large job office. The two will make a team unsurpassed in the western part of the state.—State Journal March 26th.

All of Mr. Robertson's former friends and associates will be glad to learn of his debut. Mr. Robertson is a prolific and facile writer, and his knowledge of men and time makes him peculiarly fitted for the position he is to fill. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Robertson's sarcastic and caustic style of writing will join with us in warning rival country editors to "beware of the buzz-saw." The best wishes of THE HESPERIAN go with Mr. Robertson in his new field of labor,
