EDITORIAL NOTES.

HAVE you noticed the extraordinary enthusiasm shown in the matter of oratory? We haven't either.

AS yet the ——— has not appeared. We are however informed by the managers, Messrs. ——— & ———, that it will probably be out by the — of — or at least by the — of —.

IT is currently reported that there are ripples of discord and tiny waves of hostility even in the sea of perfect brotherly love—manufactured to order—called pan-Hellenism. 'Tis strange, but true, we fear.

POSSIBLY you did not notice a little squib in our last issue. Possibly you noticed it and did not heed it. Well, here it is again. In no way can you show your loyalty to the University, and especially to the journal which represents it, so well as in patronizing the men who advertise in THE HESPERIAN. Go ye and do this thing.

THE frequency with which we have been confronted by the title "Reverend" in our alumni column has reminded us of the situation a few years ago when all the newspapers of the state were denouncing the University as an "infidel institution." It would now seem that it is impossible for a man to graduate from the University and retain his religious convictions. However, that newspaper howl subsided some time since. Even newspapers have a tendency to outgrow their foolishness.

UP to this time we have refrained from mentioning the non-completion of the boiler house. We do not yet know who is to blame for the delay. Perhaps it is in the nature of boiler houses to be a little behind hand. The present delay promised most serious results until the resort to stoves in University hall. Even now in the other buildings the imperfect heating is dangerous to the health of all who frequent them. Whenever the completion of a work depends upon many people it is liable to innumerable hindrances and delays. We are suffering from the operation of general law therefore—which, however, does not make the suffering any less severe.
