EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE HESPERIAN wishes to remind all university athletes that the inter-collegiate field day will soon be here and further that if they wish to maintain for the local athletic association the honor that the base ball team has won, it will be necessary for them to do considerable training in the near future.

OUR base ball team has succeeded in covering itself with glory. Boys, THE HESPERIAN is proud of you, for you do honor to the university you represent. In college oratorical contests we never win, but in college base ball we are never defeated. It is consoling to know that we can win in certain kinds of contests.

IN this issue we present our readers with a list of the periodicals that are accessible to students of the university. It may be well for each student to preserve this number of THE HESPERIAN, for it will certainly assist him at some time in his reading. Since it has been impossible to persuade the powers that be of the necessity of publishing a printed catalogue, THE HESPERIAN has done the next best thing possible by giving a list of the periodicals. They will be surprised at the large number of periodicals received at the university. We do not advertise our advantages as we should do. A great number of the people in the state are ignorant of many of the superior advantages that are afforded by the university. Let us try to give those people a correct impression of what we are doing.

ALTHOUGH it is some time yet before the next state oratorical contest we may be pardoned for making certain suggestions, because in making those suggestions we have at heart the interest of the university. In the last state contest the gentleman who won did not do so on manuscript for two of the judges on thought and composition had ranked our orator ahead of him. If our orator had been as successful in delivery, he would have won first, for four judges decide. Now we are certain that every stud-
