EDITORIAL NOTES.

FROM latest accounts it is now a moral certainty that Cupid has taken up his abode not many miles from these classic halls.

SEVERAL men who were students here a short time ago, are already becoming famous in state politics. But this is not surprising when one considers the opportunities that are offered here for political training.

THE largely increased attendance at the university this year amply demonstrates the fact that dry weather and poor crops do not lessen the desire for an education.

IF the Philodicean literary society has a president and secretary we shall be glad to publish their names in the society directory. If not we shall feel ourselves justified in regarding the society as either dead or sleeping and treat it according.

IT seems that all interest in foot ball has died out this year. This is to be regretted. With a sufficient amount of practice the University could certainly put a foot ball team into the field that would be able to win as much glory as did our base ball nine last year. Of what use was it to purchase a ball and to incur other expenses if all interest in this matter is to be suddenly dropped. We hope to see the old enthusiasm for foot ball revived. It is a good muscle developing game and should become a permanent feature of the University.

AFTER long years of impatient waiting the students of the university are at length permitted to enjoy the privileges of a good gymnasium. It is now something like five years since we were assured that a gymnasium would be fitted up in the near future. Several classes have graduated since that time. A few of the students who were then in the first year of the Latin school are now seniors and thus have but a few months in which to enjoy the much needed opportunities for physical culture. But several more, who five years ago were struggling with Latin conju-
