Luther H. North of this place, who returned on Friday last from General Oster's exploring expedition, submitted to an interview by a Journal reporter, who obtained from him the following particulars: Mr. North was connected with the scientific part of the expedition, as assistant to G. B. Grinnell, a paleontologist of Yale college. The expedition started from Fort Lincoln, under command of General Custer, on the 2d of July, with ten companies of cavalry, two of infantry, besides teamsters and private citizens, to the number of one hundred and fifty. Bismarek, opposite Fort Lincoln, is the last settlement. Mr. North describes the country between that and the Black Hills as poor and desolate looking, vegetation short and dry, and the country all burned over on their return. The water along the route until the foot of the Hills, is poor, impregnated with alkali. Mr. North describes the Black Hills as a wonderful country. The valleys are narrow, but look productive. There is a vast amount of pine timber, mostly pitch pine, but some spruce. The water in the mountains is very excellent. Game is abundant, such as deer, elk, grizzly bear, besides plenty of small game. Good fish are found in abundance, but of a variety which none of the expedition seemed to be acquainted with. There was no trouble with the Indians at any time, though fresh camping grounds were found. There was nothing of extraordinary interest occurred, and nothing of special note discovered. At the head of the Grand river, the explorers came upon a cave, of which they had heard a good deal of their Indian guides, one of them saying that the devil and all his imps lived there, and that the Great Spirit had painted hieroglyphics on the walls, that these often shone like fire, and that yells and groans were heard to proceed from the cave. When explored, however, it was found to have no particular interest attached to it. The "reception room" was about fifty feet long and twelve feet high, and they succeeded, by crawling on their bellies, in running to a point four hundred feet from the entrance. The hieroglyphics turned out to be rude pictures of Indians, suns and horses, such as savages paint on their buffalo robes, and some of the party allowed that if the "Great Spirit" couldn't paint better than that he had better sell out. This is the first expedition that ever entered the Black Hills, though several had been around them. Gold was found, and the miners were satisfied from the prospecting that there was abundance of it. At a depth of six feet it "panned out" twenty-five to fifty cents a pan. The expedition returned to Fort Lincoln on August 30th.

The old settlers of Colfax county held their seventh annual picnic last week at Schuyler. It was a great success, there being three thousand people in attendance. The following is taken from the Free Lance: "W. A. McAllister, for years an attorney of Columbus, but one of the first settlers in this county, the family locating south of Richland along the lake that now bears the name, was the next speaker. He said he came here as a boy fifty years ago when there were countless buffaloes and when Indians were plentiful. He told about an Indian massacre at Plum creek. He reviewed the trials and hardships of those days and told how they had to go to Omaha, to market, which meant a week's trip—three days each way—hauling grain down and provisions home. The settlers sold feed to freighters and emigrants and always got from one to two dollars per bushel for it. In those days there was but one threshing machine in the county to do threshing for the settlers who were along the Platte river and few and far between. The prices were ten cents per bushel for wheat and six cents for oats. He mentioned the old settler and their dances and entertainments, going miles to same. It was an interesting and entertaining review. One good point was the pride he always took in the state, even at that early date."

Columbus is going to have the largest grain elevator in the state outside of Omaha and Lincoln and it will be completed and ready for business by December 1. The T. B. Hord Grain Co. are erecting this building for their use and it is being built modern throughout, and is to be used mainly for cleaning in transit the grain bought at their twenty-one elevators located on the Union Pacific. The elevator will have a capacity of 300,000 bushels, and is 182 feet long and the elevator portion on the west part will be 107 feet high from the track. It will be equipped with power unloaders for unloading cars; car puller, cleaner, and patent cooler for taking care of grain that may become heated. Belt conveyors, one at the top and one at the bottom, and each 150 feet in length, will be used to transfer the grain from one portion of the building to another, and two elevator stands will be used for elevating. It will require individual motors whose power aggregate seventy-five horse power, to operate the machinery, and this will be furnished by the city plant. Twenty-five cars of lumber, sixteen cars of stone, twelve cars of sand and three cars of cement will be used in the construction of the building.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevenson was the scene of a pretty but quiet wedding Monday afternoon when their oldest daughter, Miss Via, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Lawrence Shaw. The nuptials were pronounced by the Rev. Dibble, pastor of the Congregational church, late in the afternoon, in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw departed immediately after the ceremony for Omaha for a short sojourn. The bride, who has been employed as stenographer in the Columbus Creamery, which is owned and operated by her father, is well known, and by her kind and gentle manner has won many friends. The groom, who was formerly from Kearney, is one of Columbus' progressive young men and for the past year has been employed as book-keeper in the Columbus Creamery. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw will make this city their future home.

The Fourth annual reunion and encampment of the Westlicher Kriegerbund (German Western Veteran Association) will be held in Columbus September 4, 5 and 6, 1908. The reunion this year was held at the German home in Omaha and about 8,000 people were in attendance. The two delegates representing the local order were Bert Engelman and Gust Harms, and besides the delegates Editor Kinder of the Biene and others were in attendance. The organization is three years old and composed of men who have served an enlistment in the German army. The district which will be represented at the Columbus reunion is composed of all the western states, and as the order is growing rapidly at least 4,000 people will be here then. The local society was organized last spring and has a membership of twenty-eight, Peter Schmitt being president and H. F. Greiner, secretary.

Dr. A. G. Lueschen, who has been located in Columbus for the last few years, has sold his practice to Dr. Campbell of Beatrice, his successor taking charge about November 1. The doctor will leave this city about November 1 and go to New York city for a post graduate course, after which he will go to his new location. This deal does not include the new building which he is putting up on Olive street, as he still holds that and will rent the second story to his successor and the floor to Mrs. Foskett, who will move the Racket store into it.

The following resolutions were adopted by the convention. Resolved, That being in duty bound, we again renew our expression of love and devotion to our Holy Father, Pope Pious X, and pledge our fidelity to him as head of the Catholic church.

That we express our deep gratitude to our Right Reverend Bishop Seanel and the Clergy of Nebraska, who take a deep interest in our order, and we hope that by our conduct, we will prove worthy of their confidence.

That we return our sincere thanks to the members of the order in Columbus, for the beautiful reception, and kindly way in which we were entertained while in their city.

That we again assert our unswerving fidelity to the fundamental principles of our order, viz: The complete independence of Ireland; while we welcome any measure that will bring relief to our suffering brethren in Ireland, never-the-less we will never be satisfied with anything less than complete and absolute separation from England, and we pledge ourselves to work unceasingly to attain that end.

That while we are glad to see any movement that will uplift our race or better our people at home or abroad, we cannot as an organization endorse any special policy, but we recognize the right of the individual member to take part in any movement he deems best; and while the Ancient Order of Hibernians stays clear of all other organizations, we will yield to no organization or society in our efforts to presume the purest principles of Irish Nationality, and will not allow any set of men to dictate to us the policy of our order.

That we heartily endorse and pledge our fullest support to the revival of Irish Industries, which naturally will be the greatest relief to the people of Ireland, until they be allowed to manage their own affairs. That we commend the great work of the Ladies Auxiliary and recommend that organization to the earnest support of all our members.

That we are in hearty sympathy with the recommendation of our National President, in regard to organization of juvenile divisions, and we refer this suggestion to our incoming officers for their most earnest consideration and development.

That we heartily congratulate our National Editor Patrick J. Hartigoin on the able and scholarly way in which he has edited the National Hibernian, and we believe that the people of every Catholic home would be better for reading such a paper.

We most earnestly recommend to our members and their families, the True Voice of Omaha, a paper which is an absolute necessity in every Catholic home in Nebraska, and we thank the Rev. Editor for the kindly way in which he has at all times treated our order, and we sincerely hope that the True Voice will find its way to every Catholic home in the west.

As members of a race whose devotion to the Catholic church is known to the world over, we believe that our children cannot make good citizens unless they receive a thorough Christian Education in their early youth, we earnestly recommend the Parochial schools for the children of Irish parents and we pledge ourselves to give them our earnest support at all times.

We view with great pride the progress that has been made in Ireland with the Gaelic Language, and we recommend that the incoming State President interest himself in organizing a Gaelic class in each division of our order in Nebraska.

That we highly commend the action of our National President in bringing about the alliance of our order with the German-American Alliance.

We warn all officers and members that they must not in any way use the Ancient Order of Hibernians for any political purpose; each individual member has the right to choose his own political party; but our order cannot by any means be used by any class or party.

The following officers were elected for the next two years: President, Dr. T. E. Malloy, of Omaha; Vice President, S. J. Ryan, of Columbus; State Secretary
