

Introducing our...

Matchless
Millinery

Opening Days are

Friday
Saturday

SEPT. 17-18

Large hats are first in favor—even the toques and turbans being extra large of their kind. Side rolled and sharply upturned brims are highly favored. Novelty distinguishes the trimmings. Our millinery display is notable one. Not a good style missing and many exclusive effects are offered for your selection. Our leadership in Millinery will be more pronounced this season than ever before because of our superior styles and values. You are cordially invited to this Opening. Come and view the new hats while the showing is at its best.

Route No. 1.

Frank Aerei, sr., began sowing fall wheat last Monday.

Frank Luchsinger was on the market Monday with a car of fat hogs.

Last Saturday we received a very acceptable present of a sack of oats. Presents like this from the patrons are appreciated by the carrier, not for their actual value, but for the fact that they show the patrons appreciate work of Uncle Sam's mail man.

Notice.

All accounts due the Nebraska Bieze are payable to E. A. Harms.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the many friends for their sympathy and acts of kindness in the sickness and death of our beloved son and brother, Clyde.

Great Value of Noble Life.

Every noble life leaves the fiber of it interwoven for ever in the works of the world.—Ruskin.

As It Seems.

A chauffeur claims that one woman can scatter in as many directions as six.—Kansas City Journal.

Bruin's Bad Break.

Bear mince, hide, hair and spots of blood near Wortman's roadhouse mark the place where a careless bear rolled down the hillside into a bunch of steers being driven over the trail from Valdez to Fairbanks. The fight took place where the trail runs along the foot of a steep bluff. It is not certain what made the bear come down. He either lost his footing while rubbering at the herd or took a running jump to stampede the bunch in the hope of biting off a porterhouse steak. In either event his calculations were wrong, for those 35 steers fell upon him like two-and-twenty football players upon the ball. In less than a minute the cowpuncher couldn't see what was going on, except that there was trouble.

Then the scent of butchered bear assailed the breezes and those 35 hysterical steers stampeded in all ways at once, and it took the punchers half a day to gather them together again. The bear will never get together again in this world. He is supposed to be dead.

A Man of Judgment.

"She turned her entire fortune over to him as soon as they were married."

"She must have unbounded faith in his judgment to give him control on so much."

"She has; he is the first man that ever told her she was beautiful."

As Observed.

"Golf is a good deal like the piano," observes the grouchy old sportsman "It's generally played by people that don't know much about it."

Victim's Wail.

It's all right for a woman to save time, but making cherry pies with the stones in 'em is a poor way to do it.—Detroit Free Press.

Try It.

You can save yourself useless worry by permitting other people to attend to their own private affairs.

Head and Heart.

It takes a very great intellect to equal the pleasures of a very simple heart.—Beatrice Mantle in "Gret."

Learning Through Adversity.

He that has never known adversity is but half acquainted with others of himself.—Colton.

Armed to the Teeth.

Prejudice has always been the most heavily armed foe to progress.

HOT WATER HEATING

For the Farm Home

All the comforts of town life can now be had on the farm.

Heat the house with hot water, and get the maximum amount of comfort at a minimum cost. The day of the base burner—in the country home is rapidly passing.

WHY NOT HAVE THE BEST

The time to install a heating plant is from now on.

Once installed, they last a lifetime.

Come in and let us tell you about it, or drop us a card stating what you want.

ACT UGLY AT HOME

A WORD ABOUT FRETFUL AND FAULT-FINDING HUSBANDS.

Too Many Men Vent on the Family Circle the Irritation They Have Been Restraining All Day—Necessity for "Growlery."

Men are apt to fall into careless habits at home. They thoughtlessly, perhaps, speak sharp words that strike and sting like arrows in the heart.

They are not so abroad. They are thoughtful to other women, and smile their sweetest smile. But at home, too often, they are careless in speech and un mindful of the effect of their words.

They are perturbed with the meanness of men they have to do with in business, and they come home fretful, and, without thinking, vent on the home circle the irritation they have been restraining all day.

"Did you cook the fish I bought?" said a husband coming home at night.

"Yes, my dear."

"I should like to know how you cooked it. I'll bet any money you have spoiled it for my eating."

"Taking off the cover—I thought so. Why in the world did you fry it?"

"My dear, I thought you preferred it fried."

"You thought no such thing. Why didn't you boil it?"

"The last time we had fish I boiled it and you said you liked it fried. But I have boiled some."

And she lifted a cover, showing the shoulder of a cod nicely boiled.

"A pretty dish, this!" he exclaimed.

"Baked fish, chips and porridge. If you had not been the stupidest woman you would have made a chowder."

She immediately placed before him a dish containing an excellent chowder, saying: "My dear, this is your favorite dish."

"Favorite dish, indeed!" growled the grumbler. "I would rather have a boiled frog."

FAME CANNOT BE ANALYZED.

Possible Only to Take it at Its Face Value—Edgar Allan Poe a Case in Point.

To be famous is not necessarily to be great, and to be great is not necessarily to be famous. In the vernacular, to be famous is to "make a hit."

The next question to be decided by the authorities, self-appointed or otherwise, is whether the fame is deserved. That invariably starts an argument. No fame was ever unambitious.

Fame, therefore, can be taken only at its face value. Just as soon as we attempt to subject it to the critical analysis of different viewpoints, we are embarked on the stormy sea of dispute without compass or quadrant, without destination or starting point, doomed forever, like the Wandering Jew, to float on and on to nowhere.

Buffeted thus aimlessly is the shade of Poe. In the ordinary acceptance of the term, he was and is famous, and the effort of his detractors to make out otherwise only serves to increase his fame. Whether he is justly or deservedly famous or not, is quite another question, a question which is both irrelevant and indeterminate. It is irrelevant because fame is objective rather than subjective. If it is to be qualified, it takes its quality from the contemplating public and not from the man under consideration, bringing us to the point of introduction to the question of fame.

Hence the question is also indeterminate, since arbitrators plenipotentiary disappeared with the "divine right" bubble.

In the matter of Poe's going into the Hall of Fame depends and should depend upon those having the Hall of Fame in charge, whether they be Anthony Gemstocks, Battery Dan, John L. Sullivan's or other gentlemen who may have happened to become famous in their chosen sphere. Others should keep hands off.

Whatever the outcome, the Hall of Fame merely reflects the opinion of those who have it in charge. No matter how much public discussion there may be, no matter how much outsiders may engage in controversies in which they have none but a bellicose interest, the governors will still use their own judgment, and we will be supposed to infer that their selections were deservedly famous. There is no danger of any one's deliberately starting a Hall of Unjust Fame.

The only other way would be to decide it by referendum. If we should vote him in and his fame was still undeserved, then, of course, it would prove that we were a bad lot.—Lippincott's.

Sordid Smuggling.

Times were when the career of the smuggler carried with it all the glamour of romance. The pebbly beach, the moonless night, the signal upon the headland, muffled oars, the whispered command. "Full away, my hearties, the silent landing of the wine casks and the bales of silk and lace, the click of the horse's hoof on the flint, a sudden rush of the excise men from their concealment in the rocks, the cutting loose of the horses, the flying escape, and Dirck the smuggler is beyond pursuit. These were the concomitants of the old-time drama. Those days are no more. The tax-dodger is not a picturesque figure. Smuggling has dropped to a dead level of sordidness. To say that smuggling is largely a woman's offense is to advance an easily maintained proposition. Dodging government claims is not a matter of sex. But mental attitudes differ. The male smuggler is the more conscious offender of the two. He will more readily admit the force of the argument that revenue must be raised for public expenses and it may be to protect home industries, likewise that it is only fair to tax objects of luxury at a higher rate than necessities.

W. E. JOHNSON.

A Famous Statue.

Charles Champosene, who has died at nearly 80 years of age, owed his fame to the find of a single statue, but one of the two or three most beautiful in the world. It was he who in 1863, discovered the "Victory of Samothrace," which rivals the "Venus di Milo" as the jewel of the Louvre sculpture galleries. M. Champosene was French consul in the Levant when he was sent to excavate in the island of Samothrace. The wonderful winged figure and the gallye prow on which she is poised were found in 120 fragments—not at once, but bit by bit. The excavations lasted several years and the pieces were brought in different lots to France. The reconstruction of the fragments was a long task, which was admirably done. The head, the arms and a great part of the wings are missing, and there is no hope now of recovering them, but the movement of the incomplete figure is a marvel, and Champosene's find ranks with the greatest antiquities extant.

Ploughing Dee for a Hospital.

A somewhat novel method of obtaining funds for a hospital was adopted by the Casterton (Victoria) committee. The president induced the committee to lease 25 acres of land and then arranged with a number of neighboring farmers to plough and sow it. Twenty-five teams turned to the ploughing operations, which were completed in a single morning.—The Lancet.

For Snake or Dog Bites.

Caustics should be applied to the bites of snakes or mad dogs after the poison has been sucked out and the wound bleeds. A hot iron, a lighted cigar, muriatic acid, caustic potash, and lunar caustic, or nitrate of silver are recommended for these purposes in cases of emergencies, although the aid of a physician should be secured if possible.

Saved the Situation.

She raised her head from his shoulder for a moment.

"Do you believe that exercise and lotions and toilet preparations will improve a woman's looks?" she asked.

He pressed her blond curls back upon his chest.

"They couldn't improve the looks of some women," he said.

"Whose?" she asked.

"Well, yours and Violet Cochrane's, for instance," he replied thoughtlessly.

"I don't understand you," she said, raising her head for the second time and chilling him with a look. "We are not at all alike."

"I mean," he replied, turning her head for the second time and thinking quickly, "that your looks couldn't be improved because they are perfect as they are, and hers couldn't be improved because no amount of work could make her pretty."

And the freight flickered knowingly as she sighed a great sigh of contentment and relief, while he drew a deep breath.

Not Natural.

Redd—Have you ever timed your automobile?

Greene—Oh, yes. It stood perfectly still for 48 minutes on the road today.

Why Have an Office?

Have you ever noticed that about 99 out of every 100 of the people who call at your office want you to do something for them?

Nero's Test.

The deadly gauge of Nero's drunkenness was a finely wrought intaglio ring. When he could not see the signs on it he knew he was drunk.

Unusual.

"What makes you think your boy is different from other boys and destined to make a hit in the world? Did he distinguish himself in his studies at college?"

"Not particularly, but he did not come home from college dressed like a nigger minstrel"—Houston Post.

Practical Wisdom.

School Teacher—What lesson do we learn from the busy bee?

Tommy Tuffnut—Not to get stung.—Stray Stories.
