HOW BLOCK SIGNALS WORK

Comparatively few people know just what is meant by block signals when they read that a railroad has cotablished the system on its lines. The block is a length of track which, on double track roads, has at its es trance a post and movable arm, and on single track lines one at each end. To say that a line has every inch protected by this system means that the entire line is divided into consecutive blocks. Only one line from Chicago to New York is thus protected, and of the total in the United States, one-third is on the Union and Southern Pacific. The operation of the block system is simple but absolute. In a few words, it means that a train cannot move from one block into the next until the latter block is empty. As a train moves forward, the signal arm is set to show that the block just left may be entered by the next train following. When a train enters a block it so affects the energy that is a part of signaling that the semaphore arm remains horizontal until the block is vacated, when the arm automatically drops and points diagonally toward the ground. Therefore, as long as the engineer sees only drooping signals he can keep on going, but the instant he finds the arm stretching out over the track, he must come to a stop, knowing that that block is occupied by another train. The energy mentioned above is electricity, the current being obtained from a battery near each post. The rails of each block are made as if all of one piece by connecting the joints connected and thus a circuit is formed in which the current flows. When no train is in the block, the mechanism operated by the current pulls the arm down and holds it there. When a train enters the block the wheels and axles, combined with the rails, form a shorter circuit, the energy that held the arm down is withdrawn and up it swings to a horizontal position. Each block is independent of all other blocks. When the last wheels of a train leave it, the current resumes its flow and the signal arm at the entrance is pulled down to the "proceed" position. But before the the front wheels of the locomotive have entered the next block and caused the arm there to rise to the

For a single track line the automatic arrangement is the same, but there is a signal at each end of the block. To prevent two trains on a single track line entering a block at the same time from opposite ends, before the entrance to a single track block is reached the train sets a stop signal at the far end of that block and as it enters it sets the entrance signal to stop just as is done on double track. Half a mile or more before reaching the entrance signal of each block the engineer comes to what is called the "distant," which tells him how the other or "home" signal is set.

As the automatic signal is constructed, it cannot show "go ahead" unless the entire combination of rails, wire, current, magnet, etc., is working perfectly. If a wire parts, a rail breaks, a battery fails, a switch point opens the slightest, the combination fails and the re leased arm resumes the horizontal position. So, when the engineer sees the stop signal, he knows that there may be a train on the block, an open switch, or a broken rail or signaling appa-

At night colored lights are displayed on the same posts. The lamps will burn eight days without replenishing, but are refilled every four or five days. When the home signal is at stop, the engineer sees the flame through a red glass. The caution light on the distant is yellow. A green lights means go ahead and is used on both the home and distant signals.

Where two or more lines cross at grade the general plan of semaphore arms for day and colored light for night is the same, but owing to the complications all signals are controlled by levers operated by men from a central station. The crossing and contiguous tracks are governed by the interlocking system. When this is in perfect order and the crossing unoccupied, it displays "stop" to largest majority on judges about every track approaching the crossing. 3,000. Any change must be made by the signalman, and to display "proceed" he must first lock all other approaches with the stop signal.

There are now about 11,000 miles of railway equipped with the block system. The only line thus protected every inch from Chicago to California is via the Northwestern, Union and Southern Pacific. One-third of the 11,000 miles of automatic signaling is on the Harriman lines-and the Northwestern has more miles of double track automatic than any other rail-TAY- bas 1.

In the year 1908, the old line life in surance companies of Nebraska collected premiums from the people of this state amounting to $842,725, while the outside old line life companies collected $2,695,954. For every dollar paid to a Nebraska company the outside companies received more than three dollars. This proposition should at least be turned around for the best interests of the people of the state, and The Midwest Life and the other state companies are doing their best to persuade and educate their fellow Nebraskans to do so. What gain or advantage is there to any Nebraskan individually, or cellectively, to the people of the state, to have these premiums, or the larger part of them, sent out of Nebraska? One same and emphatic way to "Stand up for Nebraska" is to buy from Nebraska insurance companies what they have to sell, especially when it is a good article, whether it is life insurance, fire insurance or accident insurance. The premium rates of The Midwest Life of Lincoln are reasonable. Its policies are as good as any on the market today and none are better. The premiums paid it stay in Nebraska.
