

The week's most notable event was the dancing party given by Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Thompson last evening. It was a large party, and one of the most thoroughly enjoyable of the season. There was very little else in society of general interest; the week has been on the whole, very quiet. The Thompson party and the large parties announced for next week and the week following have rescued the spring season from what might have been an oppressive dullness. After these there will be very little doing until the time for out-of-door amusements. The definite announcement in last week's COURIER of the engagement of Miss Ruby Jones to Professor Marsland corroborated a report that has been in circulation some months. Miss Jones is a very attractive girl, whose many accomplishments are well known. In her comparatively short residence in Lincoln she has enjoyed much popularity. Professor Marsland having resided in Lincoln up to about a year ago, when he severed his connection with the high school to accept the professorship of chemistry at the Belmont school in California, is widely known here. He is regarded as a particularly promising young man, as he has in the few years since his graduation from the University of Nebraska achieved marked distinction in his chosen work. It is understood that the wedding will be celebrated within the next few months.

Miss Katherine Wadsworth, of Council Bluffs, formerly of this city, made her debut in grand opera in Omaha last evening, appearing in "Ernani."

Tuesday afternoon the members of the ladies' clubs of this city were invited to the residence of Mrs. J. H. Canfield. The occasion being a discussion of W. T. Stead's book "If Christ Came to Chicago," by Miss Phoebe Elliott. There was a more or less general expression of opinion. Mrs. Will Green read Lowell's poem which Stead declares was his inspiration for "If Christ Came to Chicago."

The World-Herald says "a Lincoln lady" has engaged a box for the Omaha Elks minstrel show at the Boyd's next Tuesday evening.

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buckstaff gave a very delightful dancing party. The latter part of the evening fourteen couples danced the cotillion, which was led by Lieutenant Townley with his usual precision and elegance. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Imhoff, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Lippincott, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wright, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. White, of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Mr. Ward McAllister has written a screed entitled "Society as it Used to Be," and which is largely made up of his more or less interesting personal reminiscences of New York society in earlier days with comments on the social laws of nature, racing for social honors, learning how to live, and a close discussion of the question of whether we are a plutocracy, with an allusion to the different social sets in New York. The article, says a New York contemporary, is one of the least turgid and disjointed and one of the best written and most interesting that Mr. McAllister has yet produced. It will be read with awe by the "climbers," and with despair by the men and women of comparatively limited means but unbounded social ambition; particularly the summing-up sentence: "It would require an extraordinarily clever person who should make his way to the top round of the modern social ladder without means."

This melancholy truth is everywhere confessed:
Slow rises worth by poverty depressed.
