Mrs. A. L. Reed gave a box party Saturday afternoon to see Nat

Goodwin in "A Gilded Fool." The guests were Miss Jackson, Mrs. Balch, Mrs. Coles, Mrs. Gifford and Mrs. Frank Johnson.

Miss McKenna gave, on Tuesday afternoon, a luncheon in compliment to the prospective bride, Miss Jentie Yates, which presented some artistic and lovely features. In the first place there was a large heart-shaped table on which covers were laid for twelve. In the center was another heart formed of blue satin ribbon and forget-me-not's in the middle of which stood a tall lamp of blue porcelain; blue shaded and dainty Dresden lamps, candlesticks and silver bonbon dishes were here and there. At each plate were heart-shaped favors with guest's name and date in gold and tiny, hand-painted sprays of forget-me-nots. These contained apt, pretty quotations. Miss Yates' souvenir was a large, heart-shaped frame of blue satin, containing photographs of the bridesmaids, while for the latter were small frames, cut heart-shaped, with border of forget-me-nots and containing a photograph of Miss Yates and bearing the words forget-me-not in different languages. The guests were Miss Jentie Yates, Miss Sterling, Miss Lemon, Miss Brittain, Miss Johnson, Miss Bessie Yates, Miss Kountze, Miss Dundy, Miss Stee Miss Webster and Miss Doak.

Last Saturday Mrs. Joseph Barker entertained at luncheon Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Newman, Mrs. Redick, Miss Dundy, Mrs. Holterhoff and Mrs. Wood.

People are still debating as to whether Nat Goodwin was under the influence when he appeared in "A Gilded Fool" Monday night. However that may be, there is evidence that he took a drop after the show.

The COURIER was in error in stating that the Omaha minstrel show cleared $1 from the performance in this city. There was a profit of a dollar or so for a time, but the ladies kept finding new items of expense, and our latest information is that there is a deficit of $4.

Mrs. Walter B. Hargreaves has undertaken a large sized contract. She is interested in the charity concert to be given at the Lansing theatre, December 18, and she is determined to make the concert a gala society event—but that is not the big part of her undertaking, which is an effort to induce all of the ladies to appear without their hats. Men have been willing to almost lay down their lives to accomplish what Mrs. Hargreaves proposes to achieve by moral suasion.
