About two months ago an announcement was made that Omaha was to have a University club. Five young men in this city well acquainted with the past disastrous history of like efforts, yet believing that those failures were due solely to mismanagement have taken hold of this bugbear and "hoodoo" and are staking their reputation upon its financial success, at least. The new University club is wholly the work of these five men, who have installed themselves as directors for the coming year, and who intend to run the club according to notions laid down in the articles of incorporation and the by-laws. These men are Lysle I. Abbot, president; Frank Crawford, vice president; Charles L. Thomas, secretary; Hugh A. Myers, treasurer, Randall Brown, director. The charter members of the club are S. C. Cowin, Victor B. Caldwell, Richard S. Hall, W. D. McHugh, J. R. Clarkson, R. W. Patrick, I. F. Congdon, Frank Crawford, Charles L. Thomas, Lysle J. Abbot, Hugh A. Myers, A. W. Jefferis, J. W. Broatch, Lee W. Spratlin, H. N. McGrew, J. J. Mullen, S. G. V. Griswold, John L. Pierce, John L. Webster, William T. Nelson, Ernest Itner. In the inception of the club it was thought that it would be difficult to get more than one hundred members, but so many questions have been asked and so much interest has been displayed in the matter, in spite of the effort to keep everything quiet and to solicit no subscriptions, it is probably true that at least 200 applications will be received and approved. The main ultimate object of the club is a social one, and though athletics will probably always be a feature they are made a means to that end. It is the intention of the directors that its members shall consist of university men of the city and certain others who are acceptable to them. These are either associate or honorary members and when once they have their share of stock they cannot be deprived of membership for ordinary reasons, providing they keep up their dues. It is likely that after this year nobody but university men will be accepted and associate members will all be made honorary members. The intention is to have a club of young men of congenial tastes who can meet together and have better opportunities for getting acquainted than they have now in Omaha, where the young men are divided into so many coteries and cliques socially; that there might be in this city a place where college men might meet and talk over the joys and sorrows of college life, and further where a member might entertain a visiting friend and facilitate his acquaintance with representative college men of the city—Omaha Excelsior.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The last public appearance of Mr. Sieveking will take place Saturday evening in the university chapel. He will be assisted by Mr. Hagenow and orchestra, Miss Clara Anderson and Mr. C. Bruce Smith. He will then go on an eastern tour with Boston Festival Orchestra extending over a month.

Miss Emma Snelling of the university Conservatory has received a visit from her mother from Marshalltown, Iowa; also Miss Hansen enjoyed a visit from her father from Fairbury.

The two great musical organizations, Thomas Orchestra and Gilmore's Pand have no superiors in the country and these are musical treats which should be embraced by all who love music.

A pupils recital will be given in the university chapel in the near future, also a recital by the string department.

Miss Scofield will play the C minor concerto by Beethoven at the next Philharmonic Concert.

The program for Mr. Sieveking's recital Saturday evening is as follows:

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

"Mother, may I go out to wheel?"
 "Yes, my darling daughter;
 I suppose, of course, you won't wear skirts,
 Although I think you oughter."

THE CREATION.

[Written for THE COURIER.]

God kissed the waters and the day was born,
 A maiden white and fair,
 He called the rosy smiling infant Morn,
 And touched her yellow hair.
 When she grew weary and her blue eyes drooped,
 He spread her with a veil,
 And from its folds a shining army trooped,
 Her wakening to hail.
 His mighty voice upon the silence fell,
 The great initial sound,
 Lulling the daughter that He loved so well,
 And melody was found!
