FUNKE OPERA HOUSE

THE LAST TWO PERFORMANCES OF

THE ORIOLE OPERA COMPANY.

THIS AFTERNOON, Matinee at 2,

THE POPULAR OPERA "MASCOTT."

THIS EVENING, Last Performance

THE TUNEFUL OPERA "ERMINIE."

THE THEATRES.

All the week the Oriole Opera Company has been presenting light opera at the Funke. A few weeks ago Mr. Zehring in the Spooner Company, gave us the first popular price dramatic organization known to the west, and now in the Orioles we have in all respects, the most meritorious and deserving opera company that has played in Lincoln at popular prices. Beatrice and Goldie Rinehart are well known in Lincoln and they are this week appearing to better advantage than ever before. They are supported by other singers and comedians who give to such operas as "Said Pasha," "Chimes of Normandy," etc. life and go, not unmixed with genuine melody. Beginning with "Said Pasha" Monday night the operas have been adequately staged and intelligently sung. The thirty people in the company have strived to do their best, and when it is considered that the performances have been given at popular prices, the result has been most satisfactory. This afternoon at 2 "Mascott" will be presented and tonight the engagement will close with "Erminie."

MONKEY, MONKEY, BOTTLE O' BEER.

When we were boys, long years ago,
And played the games that we all know
As "fox and geese" or "blind man's buff",
Or other games that were more rough,
We had the queerest way to find
Who'd be the fox, or who would blind—
This was the way 'most every time
Someone would say this odd, old rhyme:
Monkey, monkey, bottle o' beer,
How many monkeys are there here?
One, two, three, out goes he.

In after years when youth had flown
And we to older men, had grown
When life had brought us tears and cares
And sin had spread its luring snares,
When fame was blighted, love was dead
When strength was going, hope had fled,
Old Fortune stood the self same way
And counted out day after day:
Monkey, monkey, bottle o' beer
How many monkeys are there here?
One, two, three, out goes he.

And when the heart beats faint and slow
When hair grew white as winter's snow
When heads were bowed and backs were bent,
With the weary load that life had sent,
When tottering step and sightless eye
Proclaimed the end of life was nigh
Old death repeated, solemn, slow:
Monkey, monkey, bottle o' beer,
How many monkeys are there here?
One, two, three, out goes he.

LAWN TENNIS.

It is hoped that local players will make a point of visiting other courts about town this summer, more than has been the past custom. No one knows just how many lovers of the game we have here and a census is now in preparation. Lincoln has never taken proper notice of tennis and it is hoped this season will prove the beginning of better things. It is reported there were 1700 sets in use at one time on the opening day in Central Park.

The pioneer of local tennis, Mr. S. L. Geisthardt, is at last getting some deserved appreciation from the press of the city as the following from the pen of the Journal poet, Mr. A. L. Bixby will amply testify.

When Lawyer "Geisty" first came down
Upon this mundane sphere
The busy people of the town
Were almost shocked to hear
His infant voice in rapture raise
Before he knew his name
To sing the everlasting praise
Of tennis as THE game.
Now days at tennis court
I sit and watch the play,
Where "Geisty" always leads the sport
In his peculiar way.
And when I reach that upper "lawn"
I shall not like the "hence"
If "Geisty" with his sweater on
Is not in evidence.

Notices were sent to the different clubs throughout the state asking those who are to contest in the coming tournament to have their entries in by yesterday, Friday, so that a full program and other details can be arranged in ample time for the battle which commences Monday. Games will probably be played both morning and afternoon. The contest is open to the players of the state, irrespective of whether they belong to any club or not and it is hoped that many who have taken no active part heretofore, will avail themselves of the opportunity.

Some noticeable improvement is shown in the individual work of local players. Munger is back in the game and is the author of a new stroke entirely his own. Jones continues to improve and Canfield is doing his very best work of the season. The university boys are reported as getting in a good deal of practice, and interest in the coming match is constantly increasing.

With men when wearing these;
My bloomers, even with their size,
Are bagging at the knees."
