THIS AND THAT

One of the latest manifestations in the Fifth ward is the increased importance of the boom of A. D. Burr for clerk of the district court. Mr. Burr has been a candidate for this office for some time; but he has held back a little, and many persons have supposed that he would be willing to let Ensign and Sizer and Cochran and Maule do most of the fighting in the ward. But there are indications now that Burr may decide to get right in the middle of the fray. It is said that he will make a strong fight for the delegation.

One hears so much news away from home. The following comes by way of Chicago, appearing in the Arkansas Traveler: "The good news from Nebraska regarding the bright crop prospects, caused by recent rains, is a welcome theme for discussion just now in commercial circles. Nebraska always was a great agricultural state, one of the best in the Union, and the only blight on its fair name has been that put on by the twin disasters; the populist craze and the crop failure. But from present appearances good times are surely in store for the Centennial State, for not only is there to be a bountiful harvest, but also a return to republican prosperity which has nearly always been the state's good fortune since its inception to the Union. Republican leaders are already busying themselves in search of a 'sure winner' for the Gubernatorial chair, and thus for the present, State Auditor, Mr. Eugene Moore seems to lead in popularity. A wiser choice could not be made. Mr. Moore's administration of the office for two terms has made him a record without stain. He is a young man with a character beyond reproach, and it is just that sort of a man that Nebraska needs at the helm now to restore the confidence of the world at large and regain for Nebraska that enviable reputation she enjoyed prior to her late misfortunes."

It will be news to many Nebraskans to learn that Nebraska is the Centennial state. There is an understanding hereabouts that Colorado enjoys that distinction. And it is not generally known here that Eugene Moore, the auditor of public accounts, is a candidate for governor, although R. E. Moore, the lieutenant governor, is credited with gubernatorial aspirations. If Gene Moore intends to become a candidate he will find plenty of friends to push his candidacy along.

The Journal has this week made a XXX exhibition of itself. Late in the week, after our remarks which appear on the first page of THE COURIER were printed, the apologetic morning paper did make a pseudo answer to Rev. Chapin's sermon. But the Journal didn't answer anything. Most of the space was devoted to a defense of the republican party against pretended accusations. The republican party can take care of itself. To the charge that the Journal is actuated by no principle of right or justice and that it stands sponsor for the vilest corruption, there was no answer. The Journal can hardly deny that which everybody knows to be true.

Secretary Morton is great at sarcasm, but it is questionable if sarcasm and ridicule are exactly appropriate in official correspondence.

The prohibitionists met in state convention in Lincoln this week. The prohibs put the water pitcher under the table and put in the time wrangling over the silver question and the general state of demnition bow-wows into which the country has fallen. Scarcely anything was said about the evil of intemperance. The third party people have practically abandoned prohibition and have become populists.

We inquired a few weeks ago as to the whereabouts of that lusty warrior and statesman, Tobe Castor. We feared that an evil fate might have overtaken him and passed him on; but we are happy to learn that he is all right. He now comes to the surface in an endeavor to get Secretary Morton and Secretary Carlisle to come out to Nebraska to the democratic state convention in September and rescue the democratic party from the free silverites. There isn't much left of the democratic party save those pillars of the administration. Dr. George L. Miller, N. S. Harwood, Albert Watkins and Andrew Jackson Sawyer, but an effort will be made to gather the fragments together and keep the free silver dragon from devouring them.

"My father is at work out at Burlington Beach and I have been out there all day—just got back—and Miss — I found all my geography lessons out there. There's a bay and sea and cape and promontory and I saw a little island. My whole geography is out there. Say Miss —, I'm going to have a bicycle and I'm going to get the kind my sister can ride, and when I get it I'll bring it over and let you ride on it."

Arbuckle's Coffee has tickets in it, and when you get 150 you can get a bicycle for them, and I've got four already. You're going to teach next term aint you? I hope you will." Such was the breathless delivery of a second grade kid in the south part of the city to his teacher as she came to the door in answer to his ring one evening last week. If the little boys and girls are seeing their geography as they wander about through the long vacation it seems a favorable comment upon Superintendent Strong's system of teaching it. It makes observers of them.
