Miss Nellie Harwood, a cousin of Mr. N. S. Harwood, and Mr. E. J. Slater of Omaha, were married at Mr. Harwood's home on Thursday, Oct. 17th. After the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Slater left for Omaha, where they will live. Mr. Slater has lived in Lincoln for many years and has the devoted friends that a quiet, honest, intelligent man always has. Mrs. Slater is just as well known and just as much liked.

THE COURIER'S correspondent in Omaha sends the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ford bade farewell to Omaha this week. They will make their home in the future in the Black Hill's country.

Mrs. Theodore Schwan entertained informally at luncheon on Tuesday.

I hear that the wedding of Miss Helen Smith and Mr. George Mercer is to come off much earlier than was at first expected, November the 8th having been set as the day for the ceremony. Mr. Mercer recently purchased a home at Fortieth and Burt streets.

The Thurston Rifles gave a house on Monday night. It was the first of a series of dances to be given throughout the winter and a good time was enjoyed by all present.

Last evening at the Lincoln hotel, the Lincoln club gave a reception to Chancellor and Mrs. MacLean. This new social organization has reason to be proud of its first effort at entertaining, for the reception was a most elaborate and brilliant event, perhaps the most successful large affair ever given by society in this city. It was a graceful and altogether delightful tribute to Chancellor and Mrs. MacLean, who have in their short residence in Lincoln, come to be regarded with especial warmth and respect. The Lincoln club was generous in its hospitality, making it possible for a very large number of people to meet the guests of the evening. The committee proposed making the reception a notable event, and they succeeded to the last degree. The appointments were on a scale of unusual perfection and elegance. Such a wealth of floral beauty was never before massed together in this city, and the arrangements were generally excellent. The guests were received in the large northeast parlor. In the line with Chancellor and Mrs. MacLean were: Mr. and Mrs. Morrill, Mr. and Mrs. Gere, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Oakley, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Greer, Mr. and Mrs. Burnham. Hagenow's concert orchestra discoursed sweet music, and the people circulated through the connecting parlors and corridors over to the ordinary dining room where young ladies dispensed punch. The young ladies were: Misses Latta, Bertie Clark, Maud Oakley, Richards, Mariel Gere, Marie Marshall, Mae Moore. The dancing hall was not thrown open till after 10. In addition to the members of the club whose names appear below, and their wives, there were nearly two hundred persons present, many of them from out of town.

Wednesday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hoover was decorated for the marriage of their daughter, Lillie May, to Augustus F. Walsh. At eight o'clock the guests present took their seats and an expectant hush fell over the gay company. Miss Marie Hoover took her place at the piano and the silence was broken by the exultant sweetness of that bridal march by Mendelssohn that so many hearts have sung and that has crowned two people's happiness so often that it seems almost a part of the marriage service. Rev. John Hewitt took his place among the palms under the festoons of flowers and stood awaiting the bridal couple. Miss Helen Hoover, the bride's sister, entered and came down the aisle alone. Miss Hoover was dressed in light blue silk. Mr. Walsh entered attended by Mr. Chas. D. Mullen. Miss Hoover came in on her father's arm and met the groom before the rector, who read the simple, lofty ring service of the Episcopal church. The bride wore a white brocaded silk taffeta with a heavy and elaborate garniture of pearls. Her veil was caught back with natural flowers. At the close of the service enthusiastic congratulations were showered upon the young bride and groom and a congratulatory telegram was received from their friends Mr. and Mrs. Aitken, who had just been married in Chicago. The tables were loaded with handsome presents. Refreshments were served by Misses Broady, Steen Mullen and English, Miss Henrietta Hawley served the punch. Thursday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Walsh left for Chicago for a short wedding trip, after which they will return to Lincoln, where they have more friends and warmer ones than it is often given two young people to make.
