

MENS' FASHIONS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE COURIER.]

There is a French proverb to the effect that wise men invent fashions and fools follow them; or may be it is the other way. In either case there is not much difference, because, as a matter of fact, there is very little invention in the matter. Fashions are not so much invented as developed. They survive or perish just the same as any other phenomena, by virtue of the elements of durability or decay they have in them. The new garment of the hour is the frock overcoat. It is cut like a frock or Prince Albert coat. It fits the figure naturally and neatly, is worn buttoned and looks perfection. The lapels, tails and skirts are cut just like those parts of a frock coat. The material is quiet, black, soft cloth. Speaking of cloth, never before were there so many staple things of the finest quality and exquisite colorings, and so many new and pleasing designs of high excellence in the market. There are covert coatings, venetians and buckskins of almost every shade for spring overcoatings, and in suitings the designs in worsteds and chevots remind one of a kaleidoscope in number and beauty of colors. Many startling or loud effects are produced and are in demand by good dressers, for never before in our generation have men been allowed so much latitude in regard to colors.

Fancy vestings will not be worn during the incoming season as much as heretofore. Easter will be here very soon and a few words on the proper clothes for wear on the first day of the fashionable spring season will not be amiss. When you go out to the "after-church parade" wear a vicuna Prince Albert that closes with three buttons and has high peaking lapels faced with silk. Let your waistcoat be of the same material as the coat. Have cassimere trousers of a light gray or a black and gray striped pattern; wear patent leather buttoned shoes, a silk hat, suede gloves of slate color, fancy full laundered shirt, high standing collar, and a de Joinville collar, with a neat pin at the bottom of the knot. In the lapel have a bud or two and in your hand carry a silver trimmed cane.
