In 1887 he took the Williams Fellowship at Harvard university. He is a frequent contributor to the Popular Science Monthly and other magazines. He was a member of the Advisory Council of Parliament of Religions. The Saturday Review, Des Moines, in an article on Dr. Riale's departure from that city, said: "He is a man who stands well to the front, not only in his profession, but in the field of scientific religious thought and literature. He is one of a group of men in this country, related to similar groups in France, England and Germany, who believe the time has come when the religions of the world should be scientifically investigated and classified. Spiritual facts, 'heart facts,' must be classified as physical and scientific facts have been."
