

Miss Hattie Cady, who was the guest of Miss Grace Oakley, returned to her home in Omaha Saturday.

Last Sunday evening the annual meeting of the charity organization was held at the society rooms. Reports of the past year's work was read by J. P. Hebard, and the treasurer, H. W. Brown, read a report of the expenditures. The following were elected as a new board of managers for the ensuing year: N. S. Harwood, J. P. Hebard, J. E. Millar, William McLaughlin, H. W. Brown, W. A. Selleck, Prof. L. Fossler, C. B. Gregory, M. D. Welch, Oliver Rodgers, L. Gregory, C. M. Jacques, A. H. Weir, J. B. Ferguson, Thomas Darnall; Mesdames A. H. Dorris, N. S. Harwood, I. S. P. Weeks, T. H. Leavitt, L. C. Richards, A. M. Baird, C. H. Gere, L. Weil, A. Thompson, John N. Hyder.

The missionary society of the First Presbyterian church gave four delightful Kensingtons this week. An equal number of ladies were invited to each home. On Wednesday afternoon Mesdames J. E. Hill and W. H. McCreery opened their homes. Mrs. G. L. Meissner and T. M. Hodgman entertained other ladies on Thursday. This mode of church entertainment proved a decided success.

Miss Florence Farwell gave a little informal company Thursday evening, of eight young ladies and gentlemen, for Miss Weller of Omaha. They were the Misses Alice Slaughter, Helen Nance and Ruth Weller of Omaha; the Messrs. C. Y. Smith, R. M. Joyce, W. Valentine and John Farwell.

The boxes at the Lansing were filled on Wednesday evening. A long time ago half a show could fill the boxes at the opera houses. Now the best companies play to one or two or three empty boxes unless Frank Zehrung or John Dowden lean back in lonesome grandeur in one of them. "The Prisoner of Zenda" filled the boxes with radiant girls and beaux.

On the left, the guests of Miss Bertie Clark were, her cousin Miss Burt and Drs. Thurber and White. Mrs. Oliver's guests were Mrs. E. E. Brown, Mrs. Barnard of Omaha, who is remembered in Lincoln as a warm friend and a pleasant hostess, and Mrs. Kelley. Mrs. Church's guests were two young ladies who have appeared frequently in her logs this season.

On the other side of the house Mrs. Lansing's guests were Mrs. Fuller and an unrecognized lady. The first on the left was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter in connubial seclusion. The remaining one was filled by Mr. and Mrs. Hovey, Mr. Strode and a lady guest. In the body of the house there was a sprinkling of belles and beaux that recalled the magnificent days of the Pleasant Hour club, when the members and their selections gave tone and color to the house. That was before the evil days came. Before the grasshopper was a burden.

A new cotillion club has been organized this winter. The membership is composed of the young married people, many of whom were members of a similar organization winter before last. Their parties were given at Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buckstaff's. The first party will probably be Wednesday evening the twenty-fifth at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buckstaff, with Capt. Guilfoyle as leader. The favors will be made by the ladies, therefore they will be dainty. The members as far as they have been seen will be as follows: Messrs. and Mesdames Buckstaff, Wilson, Wright, Burr, Kelley, Burnham, Hargreaves, Brown, Lippincott, Marshall, Ogden, Boeson, Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Ladd, Capt. and Mrs. Guilfoyle, Carl Funke, George Woods, F. W. Houtz, Oliver Rodgers.

The Pleasant Hour club re-organized last week in Mr. Zehrung's office. The following officers were elected: W. E. Clark, president; Joe Mason, vice-president; Fred White, secretary and treasurer; J. H. Mallalieu, master of ceremonies; George Woods, Homer Honeywell, Matt Baldwin, executive committee.

A strong attachment for him.
