The high-five party of Friday afternoon given by Mrs. A. G. Billmeyer, was followed by a charming Kensington. The house was prettily decorated in smilax and roses. Society has run to dances for weeks and during the few hours when dinners were not in progress the time has been filled in with lunches, dinners, card parties, box parties, musicales and other things too numerous to mention. It is perhaps fortunate that Lent began Wednesday, as it will be the salvation of complexions, tempers and digestions. Apropos of all this, it is interesting to remember that the native tendency of woman to gad about has been variously represented in different ages and countries. In China, their feet are early put in bandages, compressing them to a point where locomotion is attended with extreme difficulty. In other eastern countries they are shut up in harness and guarded by large and liminary eunuchs. The North American Indian handicaps his squaw with all the impediments of the family, including the papoose; everywhere restraint is laid against her naturally fugitive and mobile tendencies. In all these expedients there is a certain measure of oppression and cruelty, but none equals the ease of the St. Louis' husband who tied a mouse to his wife's band box, thus keeping her at home ten days, until the captain brought the station cab and a warrant for the arrest of the cruel husband.

Mrs. Ed Ewing gave a happy surprise to her mother, Mrs. Emeline Ewing, on her eighty-first birthday. At this charming Kensington the following ladies spent a most agreeable afternoon: Mesdames A. B. Coffroth, M. H. McCreery, C. W. Lyman, Woods, Hindman, O. W. Webster; Madames Van Brunt and Greene, H. A. Babcock, B. R. Cowdery, T. J. Ricketts, G. L. Laws, J. C. Kier, R. E. Reese, George Clarke, Patton, William Turner, Thomas Sewell, C. L. Link, William McQuinnie, and Dr. Ruth M. Woods.

Miss Tibbetts gave a delightful Kensington tea Saturday from 3 to 6 o'clock, at her home, 658 South Seventeenth street. The fragrance of the violet pervaded the room. Bowls of these dainty flowers decorated the house. Delicious refreshments were served to the following ladies: Misses Maud Hammond, Mary Jones, Conklin, Anne Miner, Nellie Dean, Laura Haggard and Miss Steele; Mesdames Taylor, A. R. Mitchell, J. L. Teeters, Harry Freeman, G. M. Lambertson, Kimball, Silas B. Holcomb, Morris Turner, E. C. Miller, F. M. Hall, A. L. Candee, E. E. Ferris, George Meissner
