THE THEATRE

Mr. Francis Eaton, representing the "Derthick Federation of Musical Literary Clubs," has been in Lincoln this week. This organization seems to be a praiseworthy one, devoted to the extension of musical knowledge. Its purposes seem to be the performance of such works of the greater masters as can be readily reached by musicians, with analyses and explanations in lecture form. If its scope can be broadened so as to reach not merely professional musicians and competent amateurs, but also the rank and file of pupils and the general public, it should do a very valuable work, indeed. The entrance fee is not very large, and I feel like recommending the purposes and efforts of the society—although personally I have scarcely time to occupy myself with it.

On Wednesday evening, November 3, the first concert of the new Philharmonic Orchestra will be given at the Funke Opera House under the direction of Mr. August Hagenow. It is definitely announced that five concerts will be given in this series of orchestral concerts, of which the first two will be popular in their general character, the third concert will be devoted to symphony, the fourth popular, the fifth and last a request program. The soloists at the concert will be Mrs. Charles K. Urquhart, of Omaha, soprano, and Mr. Charles Hagenow, violinist. I cannot too highly recommend the purposes and functions of these concerts. In an educational way they should be of incalculable benefit to the general public. The following program will be presented at the first concert:

The Faust Brothers company, which has spent the week at the Funke, has played to unmerited light business. They present a melange of music, dancing, tumbling and pantomimic gyrations that is very amusing. In the scene where two funny little men dressed in black small clothes and with their hair coiffured into peaks at the top and side of their heads they bring to mind Cruikshank's illustrations of Dickens and their silent leaps and turns are as fascinating as Sam Weller's accomplishments. The company is English, which accounts for its flavor of holly and Christmas pantomime. The bell ringing is most melodious. Little Ruby has been well trained. She does her songs with elf-like composure and effect. The muscles of the whole company are like steel blades made in Cordova. They can tie themselves into a bowknot with no fear of breaking. This is the end of the week and this praise can therefore do the Faust Brothers no good. By the time they are ready to return to us we may know enough to treat them better. From here they go to New York where they have been engaged at Koster and Bial's for two months at six hundred dollars a week.

"In Gay New York" company played to fairly good business at the Lansing on Thursday night. The best thing they do is the ensemble dancing, singing and costuming. Eddid Foy has joined the company since it was here last winter and his intoxicated stagger at walking, talking and singing, his unpleasant, nasal choked voice requiring hard work on the part of the company to offset. The inevitable soubrette in a dark business suit, a hat and cane and colored "weskit," with the accepted feminine swagger in men's clothes, was present and apparently approved of by the audience. The play drags miserably in the third act and is not brightened by the appearance of some of the company in the body of the house. But as I said before, when the whole company is on the stage, the singing, dancing, and weaving silk covered arms and legs are very fascinating.

The theatre-going public of Lincoln has had something too much of melodrama in times past. When, therefore, a play called "Tennessee's Partner" was announced last season, little enthusiasm was shown at first, for "Tennessee's Partner" is a drama of high order, complete as to plot and story, delicate and natural as to incident, original as to characters, and intensely interesting as to situations and climax. It contains unusually well managed love scenes, and enough rich, pure and wholesome comedy to balance effectually the lesser quantity of heavy villainy. The company is a strong one, the scenery and costumes are entirely new, and the production will undoubtedly meet here with popular approval when presented at the Lansing Saturday evening, October 30. Seats on sale Thursday at 9 a. m. Prices $1. 75, 50 and 25 cents.

"Ole Olson," which comes to the Lansing next Monday November 1 possesses the happy faculty of having the very thing that everybody wants—a good, clean, honest play, cleverly written, with bright dialogue and little bits of pathos here and there, and in addition a startling dash of sensationalism to digest the meal. This is the reason that theatres have been packed everywhere this season to see

OLE OLSON.

"Ole." The great bicycle race scene has created the biggest kind of sensation for it is not only a novelty but a reality. That tremendous rider, John Lawson, better known as "The Terrible Swede," meets all comers in this genuine race and the men ride mile after mile in full view of the audience. In some cities the excitement has been so great that loud bets were heard all over the theatre. The cast is the strongest combined to give life to this comedy and includes that clever and brilliant character actor, Ben Hendricks, who is once more "Ole," a character he revels in. Miss St. George Hussey is "Mrs. O'Flannigan," the Irish woman, another wonderful creation. Seats on sale Friday at 9 a. m. Prices, boxes $1, Seats, 75, 50 and 15 cents.

The long-awaited opportunity of seeing William H. Crane comes on Tuesday at the Lansing theatre, when he will present his successful play, "A Fool of Fortune." The play has had enormous success and in its production
