1023-1029 O St.

Lincoln, Nebr.

We take Great Pleasure

This week in calling your attention to our lines of Black and Colored Dress Goods, together with our Dress Silks They are all new goods and latest styles in every respect. They are all bargains and their quality recommends their price. Give us a call.

BLACK DRESS GOODS

Our Black Dress Goods surpass anything of previous seasons. In addition to a full line of B. Priestley & Co.'s celebrated blacks, we have all the new weaves that have been brought out by foreign or domestic manufacturers, ranging in price from 45c to $1.75 per yard. We guarantee our 45c line to be strictly all wool and to give satisfactory wear, the same as the higher priced goods. See us in regard to a new black dress for spring wear.

FANCY SILKS.

See our large east window. Never before have we been able to offer so large a line of fancy silks at so low a price. 20 inch figured Taffeta neat design and good weight at 55c and 65c. 20 inch plaids and brocades and new black effects at 69c, 75c, 89c and $1.00. No one will give you any better silk or more correct style for the money. Everybody is cordially invited to come and inspect our goods whether they purchase or not, and we most sincerely hope you will do so.

coin; secretary, Mrs. Bullock, Norfolk; treasurer, the delegate from Stanton. No business was transacted and the next meeting will be in June in conjunction with the National Association.

The Lincoln household economic department has been very popular this winter, and now numbers forty eight members. The paper on Monday, "Invalid Cookery," was given by Mrs. A. P. S. Stewart. The refreshments, with the exception of clam bouillon were not illustrative of the topic discussed. Perhaps the coffee, angel food, marshmallow cake and fruit salad added to the simpler fare, were intended as object lessons of what to avoid during the Lenten season.

Mrs. Plummer's paper on "Sanitation" will be given at the next meeting, which will be held at Mrs. McLaughlin's, 255 South 27 street.

The Columbian club of Crete has held two meetings this month. February 4 the club met at the home of Mrs. Shepherd. After roll call and other business, the lesson was taken up, read and a portion discussed. Parliamentary discussion was excellent and lively, each one taking great interest. One visitor was present. We were led by our hostess to the dining room where a very pleasant tea was served and greatly enjoyed by all. February 13 the club met at the pleasant home of Mrs. Baker. After the general business, the lesson and drill occupied time and attention for a while. Great interest is taken to learn, know and understand parliamentary law. There were four invited guests. Dainty refreshments were served and a pleasant social time enjoyed by all, which passed too quickly. Adjourned to meet March 4.

FOR THE COURIER:

Last Friday evening the Tourist club, which is a department of the Schuyler Woman's club, gave a reception in the Odd Fellows' lodge rooms, to their friends and the Woman's club and a very pleasant, social event it was. The club takes up the different countries of the world as studies and so becomes a body of tourists in mind only. Having just completed Greek History, the members—who are all young ladies—appeared with their hair dressed in Grecian style, in fact most of the program of the evening was taken from Grecian literature.

The address of welcome by the president, Miss Washburn, was in her usual happy style.

Roll call—Quotations from Greek authors.

Cupid and Psyche—Story read by Miss Daisy Bolton; tableaux by Misses Helen Bryant and Margaret Palmer; music by trio of piano, violin and cornet. Pygmalion and Galatea—Story read by Miss Emma McRae; tableaux by Misses Sara Nieman and Judah Howard; music by Miss Alma Woods on piano.

These tableaux accompanied by the stories and the music were very enchanting and artistic.

After more vocal and instrumental music, delicious refreshments were served in the banquet hall, and a most enjoyable evening spent.

The officers of the Tourist club are: Misses Washburn, president; Sara Nieman, vice-president; Anna Long, secretary; Alma Woods, treasurer. The membership consists of about thirty very active workers. This department is a credit to the Schuyler Woman's club, of which it is very proud.

This makes me think of what Jules Lemaitre wrote, a propos of Madam Daudet, about the literary style of women in general. He says that with us sensation passes immediately into sentiment. A woman sees a bird singing on the branch of a tree, for instance, he says, and an average one of them would write about it, "Among the leaves the bird pours forth its joyous note." This is inartistic, because, to begin with, the leaves and the song reach the mind at precisely the same instant, so that they should be reproduced with a single impression. And, moreover, to call the bird's note "joyous" is also inartistic, since it is a subjective sentiment of which the songster may be entirely unconscious. Madame de Sevigne would have written "C'est joli une feuille qui chante." But this again, for the difficult Lemaitre, is a little self-conscious. She has found the expression "the leaf sings," and in a Jack Horner fashion must call attention to it. Madam Daudet would say "The leaf sings," and so would Miss Mary Wilkins, I should like to tell M. Jules Lemaitre.

Did I ever write you all this before? I have a half-vague idea of having talked it over with you, for it has often been in my mind; but since we are speaking of the Daudets this comes up naturally, and is interesting, as one reads the woman authors of her choice.

The Century club with a few invited friends spent a delightful afternoon on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. W. E. Kirker. About forty ladies assembled to hear a short program, and to enjoy the social intercourse which followed. Instead of the "Literary Landmarks of Florence, which was to have been given, the members of the club responded to roll call by quotations from Elizabeth
