It is one of the school laws in Boston, as in other cities, that no pupil may come from a family any member of which is ill with a contagious disease.

One day recently Willie K— appeared before his teacher and said:

"My sister's got the measles, sir."

"Well, what are you doing here, then?" replied the teacher, severely. "Don't you know any better than to come to school when your sister has the measles? Now you go home and stay there until she is well."

The boy, who is a veritable little rogue, went to the door, where he turned with a twinkle in his eye, and said:

"If you please sir, my sister lives in Philadelphia."—Harper's Bazar.

She—I like your impudence. I have not quite reached the bargain counter yet.

He—You would be a bargain on any counter.

The garbage is collected every Monday on the street in which the D—s live. One morning little Helen D— proposed discarding for good a rag doll, of which she had grown tired.

"I think, mamma," she said, "that I'll put it out for the garbage man to carry off. He can take it to the garbage woman, and she can fix it up for the little garbage children to play with."—Harper's Bazar.

Harold has a pair of twin aunties who look and dress so exactly alike that it is difficult to tell which is Miss Mary and which Miss Martha.

One day a lady said to Harold:

"I don't see how you can tell your two aunties apart."

"Oh, that's easy enough," replied Harold, "for Auntie Mary looks a good deal more alike than Auntie Martha."—Harper's Bazar.

"I shall not call upon you next week, nor the week after," said the young man. "In fact, I shall not call upon you until after Easter."

"Why not?" she asked, anxiously.

"Because I am giving up what I love best—for Lent," said he.

"Gilgal lives high."

"Does he?"

"Yes. He occupies a castle in the air most of the time."
