

ADDITIONAL CLUBS.

The closing meeting of the child study department of the Lincoln Woman's club will be of so much general interest that the doors will be open to the public. Today Dr. Wolfe will speak on Moral Nature and Moral Training. There will also be papers by Mrs. M. C. Dinsmore and Mrs. H. L. Miller. The attendance of mothers is especially desired.

The meeting of the reading circle of Gretna April 14, was well attended by both members and attentive listeners. More than fifty were in attendance. Roll call was answered by quotations from Holmes. A review of his life and mention of his works was given by Mr. Nichols and each member read a poem from Dr. Holmes. Instrumental and vocal music followed and added to the pleasure of the evening. After the regular program a number of statistics were given as conundrums, and these were interspersed with "funnygraphs." The circle then adjourned to meet May 13, in the study of Tennyson.

The last two meetings of the Woman's literary club of Stanton have been most interesting, the child study superintendent Mrs. Frank Huntly, having charge of the meetings. Mrs. Sarah Crans, kindergarten teacher in our public school, read an excellent paper and led the discussion on "In what way can the parents assist the teacher?" 1. By conversing with the child on his studies during the day. 2. By cultivating acquaintance with the teacher and her methods and assist her in carrying them out.

A paper followed by president Young entitled "In what way can teachers assist parents?" was filled with new thoughts and bright suggestions and called forth a lively discussion. This was followed by current events and a recitation from Whittier by Mrs. Underburg. Our next meeting will discuss "The child in the home."

The various chapters of the D. A. R. throughout the west choose one of their own number as chaplain. But this is not so in the east, where a regularly ordained minister is often required for this office. In all probability he is also a "son" of the Revolution, as surely no alien would be admitted into close relations with the order.

The New York City chapter has for chaplain the Rev. Dr. J. Nevett Steele, an assistant of Trinity church. On Sunday afternoon, April 17, the whole order attended Old Trinity to hear a sermon by the chaplain. The church was decorated with flowers and the national flag. After the services the Daughters decorated the graves of the Revolutionary heroes in the Trinity churchyard with flowers.

Alexander Hamilton and many other early patriots lie buried there, but from present indications the Daughters will no longer need to turn their patriotic sympathies towards the past. The intense interest in the coming war will drive the memories of the ancient heroes into temporary oblivion, for in days of action what dead hero can equal a live one?

Mary Barne's literary club of Fullerton held its regular meeting with Mrs. Kate Thompson. As this was the day for the election of officers we had no study. Three new members were added to our list. We have adopted the membership fee plan for the coming year. Each member is to pay $1.00 which entitles her to the banquet and covers all expenses for the year.

The result of our election: Mrs. M. H. Barber, president; Mrs. J. N. Johnson, vice president; Mrs. Elsworth, treasurer; Miss Mary Fee, secretary; Mrs. S. H. Penney, reporter.

Our club will sustain a great loss by the removal of Mrs. Fay Lagrange, who goes to Genoa to live. Because of the appreciation and esteem we have for this member, she was presented with a beautiful cut glass bon bon dish. Mrs. Hatton presented the token. The receiver was so surprised and overcome she could only reply with tear filled eyes.

The meeting closed with refreshments served by the program committee.

Very little importance will be given to music at the Denver Biennial. Musical numbers will be furnished by the various local musical clubs, but are intended simply to lighten the programs and not to bring those clubs into prominence. It is questionable if many purely musical organizations will remain in the General Federation, now that a similar bond of union confined solely to their own interests exists. Custom has decreed that no program is complete without a few melodious numbers, which are regarded as a bore by an audience assembled to hear papers or a discussion. For the enjoyment of any intellectual pleasure, no matter how good—the mind and mood must be in touch with the subject, and when a meeting is called for a definite purpose, the sooner that purpose is introduced the better. Any delaying element, be it music or other topic, can only be regarded a hindrance.

The General Federation has been thought to need the musical clubs for variety, but unless a definite and distinct place of their own is assigned them on the programs, it would be as well for the music to be omitted. A lecture recital on American Folk Songs by Villa Whitney White of Chicago, will be the one feature of the Biennial of distinct educational value to musicians. Miss White has gained quite a reputation both as a charming speaker and a delightful interpreter of the songs of all nations. She has given many lecture recitals before the musical clubs of the country.
