

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McDonald gave a very pretty informal Five O'clock Tea Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald received their guests in the green and gold drawing room which was fragrant with American Beauties. They were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Coffroth, Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard, Mrs. Sewall, Mr. Zehring, and Mr. Magoon. Tea was served in the dining room. The table was daintily laid with Battenburg lace and lighted by violet candles in silver candelabra, and the fragrance of violets was everywhere in the room. Mrs. Coffroth poured the tea. She was charming in a light green taffeta, décolleté gown with a choker of coral and diamonds. Champagne punch was served in the Moorish room. This room is a dream of loveliness. The walls are lined with Turkish divans and lighted by Moorish lamps hanging from a fish-net ceiling. Mrs. McDonald wore a gown of pale blue duchesse satin embroidered in turquoise with gariture of coral velvet, choker and fan chain of pearls. Mrs. William Leonard, royal blue velvet and diamonds. Mrs. Sewall wore an exquisite black gown. The five o'clock tea lingered on until near eight o'clock when the last of the guests were compelled to tear themselves away for the Philharmonic concert, but not until many of the gentlemen had enjoyed a smoke in the Turkish smoking room.

The Cotillion club met for the first time this season on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buckstaff and a pleasant affair it was, as, after the long vacation, the members were delighted to meet again. Dr. C. F. Ladd led the dance in a gracious and happy manner. The favors were given out by Mrs. W. C. Wilson and her cousin, Mrs. Loveland, who is her guest. A figure was danced in honor of the absent members, Lieutenant and Mrs. Townley. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Buckstaff of a handsome Dickens jardiniere as a token of appreciation of their commodious dancing room. During the evening Mr. Buckstaff utilized the jardiniere as a punch bowl and served from it a delicious punch. The members of the club are Messrs. and Mesdames Buckstaff, Mallalieu, George Woods, A. G. Beeson, C. L. Burr, L. W. Marshall, F. W. Brown, W. B. Hargreaves, Fred Howe, John Dorgan, W. C. Wilson, J. B. Wright, Otto Mohrenstecher, Fred Houtz, Carl Funke, Leonard, Oliver Rodgers, Dr. and Mrs. Ladd, Judge and Mrs. Irvine. Guests for Thursday evening were Mrs. Ballantine, Mrs. Griffith, Mrs. Charles O. Robinson, Mrs. J. Gilbert White, Messrs. Shedd Barber and Funke.

THE THINGS WE EAT

Anyone will willingly pay more for an article of food that they know to be absolutely pure than they will for a doubtful article. Then, when the poor article can be had for the same price as the doubtful one, people are bound to take advantage of it. That's the secret of our grocery department's success. We carry nothing but the purest of pure food and offer it at the same prices as are usually paid for inferior grades. Here's an example.

This price list goes into effect Monday, Nov. 7th. No sooner.

The poster show given last week Friday by the Lincoln Typographical union was the best exhibit ever given here. The posters occupied all four sides of Representative hall and the blues, reds, yellows and greens, with the startling black and white of the distinctively modern poster, transformed the room, over which the spirit of legislation still broods, into something which resembled in its variety and unintelligibility a synochrome of the end of the century. There were six hundred posters from Harper's and the Century, from Scribner's and McClure's and from many American advertisers of soap, medicine, chewing tobacco and bicycles. The chief point of interest were the original posters offered in the local poster contest by the Lincoln Typographical union and William Reed Dunroy for his new edition of Corn Tassels, the only book which celebrates Nebraska's prairies, winds and corn. Mr. Dunroy chose a poster by Mr. Burt, picturing a statuesque youth holding a corn tassel in each hand after the conventional manner of holding a sceptre. The union prize was won by Miss Edna Hyatt on a girl with poppies. All the entries showed imagination and a strong feeling for color. Hagenow's full orchestra furnished fine music for the large number of visitors. After the decisions were announced the floor was cleared and filled with dancers. The affair was very successful socially and very interesting artistically.

Mrs. Eliza Polk will give a Kensington this afternoon for Mrs. Miller, of Princeton, Indiana, and Mrs. Smith, of Crawfordsville, Indiana. The guests will be Mesdames J. E. Hill, Welch, C. M.
