

The evening was spent with progressive suchre. Those who took hands at cards were: Judge and Mrs Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bartruff, Mesdames Underwood, Mauritzius, Humphrey, Hoover, Langefeld; Misses Steele and Shute and Mr. Fred Humphrey.

The meeting of the state historical society which closed Wednesday evening was one of much interest. A number of the old pioneers of the state were present and the papers read were of much interest. J Sterling Morton, president of the society read a very interesting paper entitled "My Last Buffalo Hunt," at the opening of the session. Three other interesting papers were read, "A Nebraska Episode of the Wyoming Cattle War," was read by A. E. Sheldon, and C. S. Lobingier of Omaha read an article on "Some Peculiar Features of the Nebraska Constitution." The closing session of the meeting was held Wednesday evening. The first paper read was by Clyde B. Atchion of Council Bluffs, and it related to the "Mormon Settlements in the Missouri Valley." W. W. Cox of Seward gave a vivid description of the first convention held at Omaha.

Word has been received in Lincoln to the effect that Mrs. Ella W. Peattie will spend the winter in Alabama on account of the precarious condition of her son Ned's health. Mr. Peattie's mother, who has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Peattie for a good many years, died but a week ago. Mrs. Peattie's latest book, "The Shape of Fear and Other Ghostly Tales," is meeting with much success.

Mrs. H. H. Wheeler and Mrs. W. S. Summers entertained the members of Sorosis on Thursday afternoon for Mrs. Beebe of Chicago, one of the early members of the club. Each guest was invited to relate an incident which was of importance upon her later life. The response was more or less candid according to the character of the incident. One lady who had been chased by a ram in her youth and somewhat roughly treated by him, said that the incident had left a permanent impression upon her. Mrs. W. J. Bryan said that a teacher of mathematics who had an inspired understanding of arithmetic taught her the foundation of rules was reason. This teacher had probably influenced her intellectual life more than anyone else. Mrs. McGahey said that all incidents might be considered important. It depended on temperament rather than on the incidents, as, for instance, her sister rarely returned after an excursion into the neighborhood of city without a tale of adventure worth relating. But nothing ever happened to her and she marvelled until she happened to be with her sister when an incident of the kind referred to actually occurred, but Mrs. McGahey never knew it until her sister, on returning home, gave it the necessary literary treatment. There were many other pleasant reminiscences. At 5 refreshments were served and a beautiful souvenir of the occasion presented to Mrs. Beebe, designed by Mrs. Summers. It was a little book, on the cover of which is an initial B, with a bee humming about one of its tendrils. The leaves inside were blank, and the ladies inscribed their names thereon. The beautiful pen work had been done by Miss Edna Hyatt.
