SOCIETY

The convention of Zeta province of Phi Delta Theta brought about the largest and most brilliant functions of the week. The Zeta province includes the Universities of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska, Illinois, Northwestern, Chicago, Knox, Lombard, Missouri, Washington, Westminster, Iowa Wesleyan and Iowa.

The men began to arrive on Wednesday, but the first session was not held until Thursday afternoon. Acting Chancellor Bessey opened the meeting with a few words of welcome. The afternoon and evening were devoted to the sessions until five were held. The convention was a grand success. The members of the Nebraska chapter have many friends and they proved it by the elaborate and brilliant entertainment of visitors.

Thursday afternoon from four to six Mrs. Will Morrison gave a tea to the convention. The university colors, scarlet and cream, were used in the parlors where Mrs. Morrison received her guests and the delicious odor from a large bowl of red roses filled the air. The dining room was in pink. The soft, mellow light coming from shaded candles filled the room with tender, warm red. Miss May Burr and Miss Nell Holdbrook poured the coffee and chocolate. They were assisted by the Misses Tukey, Garten, Houtz, Welch, Curtis, Louise Tukey of Omaha, Maude Macomber, Richards, Edminston, Whiting, Kenny, Wetzel, Hammond, Mulliken, Hamilton.

The punch room was in blue and white, the Phi Delta Theta colors. Blue and white shades covered the globes of the lamps and a huge bunch of white chrysanthemums added the final graceful touch to the decoration. The following young ladies were in the punch room: Misses Davis, Burnham, Cole, Outcalt, Jackson, Raymond, Webster, Macomber, Miner, Hargreaves, Woods, Honeywell, Daniels, Hayes, Haecker and Cochrane. A number of old Nebraska Phis returned for the convention and lent their numbers to the active chapter and the visiting delegates in making the afternoon very enjoyable.

Thursday night the Phi Delta Thetas gave a smoker at their fraternity house to all the members of the convention. It was the first time that the men were all together and the evening will always be dear to the hearts of all who were present. Chapter songs and college yells were given, and after a Dutch lunch souvenir pipes was given to each man.

Sorosis banquet on Friday night was one of the most brilliant of all the annual feasts this club has given since the first year of organization. Sorosis has given a banquet in November each year at the home of its founder and that president, Mrs. A. J. Sawyer. Only once a year are the husbands permitted to taste the joys of Sorosis, but this is doing better than the members of the companion club, the Round Table, do for their partners. We have never been called upon to record a banquet offered by the Round Table to the ladies who prepare one for the Round Table every fortnight during the season. In recognition of faithful service, of years of coffee making, sandwich building and numberless other preparations for the fortnightly discussion of statecraft, fiscal matters and religion which the faithful Griseldas offer for the exclusive consumption of the knights of the Round Table, an annual banquet prepared by the puissant to the fair would be an unexpected, but graceful, compliment. But that is another story. Sorosis joys in the annual banquet and they are always featured.

In memory of the street fair, booths were erected and the dainty programs had a picture of a booth with a tent-roof, to suggest our passage through this world, on the cover. The two inside pages were filled with illustrated toasts. The first one by Mrs. Munger on Church Boothe was a collection of spires. The commercial outlook by J. E. Miller, illustrated by an eye fixed upon a familiar facade surmounted by a flag. His speech was followed by the old song, O Solomon Levi. Street Parades by Mrs. Welch, a thumb-nail sketch of a flower-covered barouche, occupied by dainty ladies and a parasol. Music by Miss Worley. The University by Prof. Hodgman, symbolized by girl in cap and gown, the tower of the central building and a mathematical paradigm. Concessions by Mrs. Sawyer, illustrated by the elongated stars and neck thrust of a camel. Carnival by Mrs. Tibbetts, illustrated by two fiends blowing a horn and a whistle and a hand casting confetti.

On entering the guests stopped in the hallway before two booths, one for the gentlemen and one for their partners, draped in colored bunting, to receive from Mrs. W. G. L. Taylor and Mrs. E. L. Hinman the little trinkets by which they were to be mated for supper. A gentleman with a small dustpan pinned by a ribbon to his coat searched earnestly for a lady wearing a tiny dusting broom. Another with a cigar happily discovered a parlor match. Literary devices were considered unsuitable at a street fair. When all had discovered their complement they passed in review before the judge, Mrs. H. H. Wheeler, in the judicial university gown, who pronounced on the validity of their choice before passing them on into the banquet hall.

The list of articles and guests follow:

1. Mrs. Sawyer and Judge Tibbetts, Jack and box.
2. Mrs. McGahey and Miss Irwin, Cup and saucer.
3. Miss Harris and guest, Chimney and lamp.
