SOCIETY

THE BURLINGTON ENGINE MEN GIVE A PARTY.

Their third annual ball was given by the Burlington engine men on Monday night. The great auditorium was profusely decorated by nine thousand eight hundred and forty-eight flags, an engine simulacrum with a real bell, a real headlight and a real pilot. Under the galleries were draperies of brilliant yellow, caught up with signal lanterns showing white, green and red lights. The immense ceiling space lacks a chandelier, so Mr. Bonnell constructed one eighteen feet across at its largest diameter and consisting of six or seven large hoops, graduated from the central hoop. These hoops were hung with Japanese lanterns and flags, and the effect was extremely decorative. The engine thing occupied the center and back of the stage. It was black against a ground of yellow. The front of the stage was occupied by an illuminated train. The balcony railing was filled with pictures of celebrated Burlington engine and trains, President Hayes' train, the greyhound, 1591, and No. 275, the largest engine ever built. Burlington landscape, Burlington mountains and rivers, and pictures of the beautiful Burlington depot in Omaha, made a picture gallery of the railing. Nothing was skyed. A frieze of cards, the familiar two feet square cards, with Burlington Route in the center, furnished the heavy red and black decorations for night places. "Buttermakers Welcome," in red and black letters, surrounded the engine. The man in the depot at Omaha who calls the trains, whose method is modeled on the trains he announces, called the dances. Like the rumble of a distant train coming rapidly near and nearer, his voice rolled resolutely out into the hall, announcing, All aboard No. 1, going west, Fairmont, Hastings, Holdrege, Oxford, McCook and Denver, all aboard. The ball books were six yellow tickets bound between thick card boards by a blue cord. When the passenger director announced the dance, the bell rang, and the sound of wheels and steam was heard. Two little girls and two little boys, Gertrude Cooper, Fay Bonnell, Herbert Baird and La Vada Thompson, headed the programs to the eight hundred people who joined in the grand march. The ingenious decorations and the perfect arrangements were due directly to the committee, which was constantly aided and stimulated by the spirit of enthusiasm, loyalty and pride exhibited by the engineers, firemen and resident officials of the road.

From half past eight until half past nine the Hagenow orchestra gave a concert, and it was well after half past nine before the double grand march, headed by Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. Bignell and lead by Captain Cosgrave and Captain L-Roe Brown, started. Over four thousand people were present, and it was impossible to lead the march through any figures.

The members of the committees were: General committee of arrangements—P. I. Costello, W. N. McLennan, O. D. Herrick, R. T. Smith, C. W. Hedges, J. S. McCoy, J. N. Hyder, M. E. Wells, C. E. Finch.

Finance committee—Julius Dietrich, J. N. Hyder, H. Koenig.
Music committee—W. T. Leaby, J. E.

Emery, J. J. Buttery.
Refreshments committee—R. Free-land, E. Aylwin, W. Wilkinson, J. Doerr.
Reception committee—M. E. Wells, J. W. White, J. T. Duffy, B. H. Miller, A. L. Boynton, A. L. Clayberg, H. Deys, C. H. Erwin, I. F. Taylor, R. E. Herrick, J. H. Stoner, Sam Davis, Ed. Bignell, T. G. Thompson, S. W. Palmer.
Floor committee—G. L. Graves, A. N. Young, Tom Donnelly, F. A. Lewis, F. M. Willoughby, A. J. Bignell, F. H. Johnson, F. B. Holmes.
Decoration committee—H. L. Beaty and G. W. Bonnell, with assistance obtained from various sources.

Miss Alta Wilson was married to Mr. Julian Sutter on Wednesday evening, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Wilson. The always beautiful Mendelssohn Wedding March was played by Miss Clinton, and at eight o'clock the wedding party descended the stairs and took their positions in the drawing room before a bay window curtained by smilax and pinks. The ceremony was performed by Doctor Rowlands. Miss Ethel Mack of South Bend, Indiana, gowned in pink silk, was maid of honor, and Mr. Edward Sutter of Russell, Kansas, was best man. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white organdy and carried bride's roses. About one hundred guests were present during the evening. The lights in the entire house were shaded by red globes. Smilax was caught from the chandelier in the dining room to the corners of the table, and red carnations were used as a center piece. Miss Erford poured the coffee and Miss Biltgen served punch, assisted by Miss Mabel Erford and Miss Leese. An orchestra, hidden by palms, was stationed in the library and played during the evening. Miss Wilson is a university student and has a large number of friends. Mr. Sutter is with the Trickey Jewelry company. Mr. and Mrs. Sutter went directly to their home at 1007 J street.

A very delightful party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Snell on Thursday night. The guests present were Messrs. and Mesdames Raymond, Frost, Aiken, Hewig, Guthrie, Ricketts; Mesdames Lewis and Burnham, and Mr. Lewis.

Mrs. E. Fleming entertained the members of the Eastern Star Thursday afternoon.

Miss Blanche Hargreaves will give a card party this afternoon to the members of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

Miss Gregory gave an informal tea in honor of Miss Barbra Haecker of St. Paul on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Tom Wing has returned to New York, after a visit with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clarke gave a dinner on Wednesday night. Covers were laid for fourteen, and the decorations were pink carnations.

Mrs. Charles McConnell and Miss McConnell of Omaha will visit Mr. Charles McConnell at the Lindell on Sunday.

The Cotillion club will give a cotillion this evening.

An informal whist party was given by Mrs. Traphagen on Tuesday afternoon.
