SOCIETY

Though the days are growing colder again and that nonchalance has left the air, yet I am quiet, very quiet. I do not offer lunch and dine and dance. It is the Lenten season, I suppose, that quiets me; at least I know that I am much at home. The clubs, however, keep me about a bit, both those of literary and those of social instinct. One hears particularly, of fraternities, this week, it seems to me, for some of them have reached the epoch of birthdays. And then there are always cards in this good West of ours.

The annual reception of the Woman's Club of Lincoln was given at the home of Mrs. Frank M. Hall on Monday afternoon from three to six o'clock. Mrs. Hall was assisted in receiving the members of the club and their friends by Mrs. Apperson, president of the State Federation, and Mrs. Allen W. Field, president of the City Federation. Mrs. J. H. Gleason and Miss Brundage met the guests as they descended the stairs, and presented them with a violet satin ribbon upon which was written the club motto, "The truth shall make you free." Mrs. A. A. Scott introduced those entering to the receiving party and Mrs. Callen Thompson guided the guests into the various rooms. In the drawing room and the library, mesdames Milton Scott, H. W. Kelley, H. P. Sawyer, Elmer Stephenson, J. A. Piper, A. C. Ricketts, W. M. Morning, C. F. Harpham, E. E. Chapman and Miss H. E. Brackett assisted. In the reception room and in the drawing room glorious American beauties held up their heads. In the library were brilliant tulips. In the dining room violet was the color scheme. Over the lights were shades traced with wreaths of violets. On the dining room table was Battenburg lace upon which was placed the club monogram, made of violets and primroses. There was also a silver candelabra, with lavender candles, and sparkling cut-glass water bottles and glasses. Upon the side board a great jug of Easter lilies held dominion. Mrs. Will C. Phillips, gowned in white with violet trimmings, served the pineapple ice, which was of a violet hue. She was assisted by Mesdames James H. Manahan, A. P. Metcalfe, J. E. Johnson, G. E. Haskell, O. P. Erlernorn and L. H. Atwood. The rooms up stairs were thrown open. On the tables were art books and art journals and vases of pink roses.

In every picture or in every musical composition there is always a background which determines, to a certain extent, the success of the work. In Mrs. Hall's home there is a background of softly colored walls from which hang pictures, that inspire one with the desire to see them time and time again. There are also marbles and bronzes that speak of the glories of Italy and breathe into this far town of ours, the breath of the beautiful. Long lingered the guests at Mrs. Hall's on Monday afternoon.

On Friday evening the members of the Delta Gamma gathered at the delightful home of Miss Garten to do honor to their twenty-eighth birthday by feasting and merry-making. At seven o'clock the young ladies sat down to a glittering banqueting table which was stretched through two long rooms and laid for forty covers. From the chandelier to the four corners of the table were festoons of pink roses. The tout ensemble of color was pink. Silver candelabras with pink candles, and vases of pink roses were on the table. The lights were shaded in pink and so for a few hours, at least, the world itself was rose colored to a number of people. The great mantle, covered with many strands of smilax and clusters of pink roses, formed a charming background to the table and its guests. The menu cards were most attractive, being in the shape of anchors and tied with pink, blue and bronze silk cords. On the shield part of the card were fascinating girls' heads done in water colors by Mrs. Edmister and Mrs. Nicholson. Those present were: Misses Haggard, Deutsch, Dennis, Wing, Dewese, Starrett, Mullon, Rice, Webster, Gregory, Cochrane, Bridge, Laura Bridge, Garten, Woods, Noren, Watkins, Polk, Mulliken, Woods, Welch, Davis, Tukey, Cole, Macomber, Maude Macomber, Janes, Jackson, Haecker, Kenney, Hamilton, Daniels, Hozeywell, Wilson, and Harley. Mesdames Sherman, Fisher, Woods, Edmisten and Lau. The toasts fulfilled the functions of a toast being short, wise and witty.

The Ideal Mandolin orchestra played during the evening.

Mrs. Schlesinger entertained the Unity club on Tuesday evening. Besides the members of the club, Miss Lottie Greenbaum, a guest of Mrs. Weil, and Mr. Nathan Rothschild of Denver were present. Mr. Henry Blum won the gentleman's prize and Mrs. Newmark the lady's.

Friday evening the Naomi society of the Hebrew church gave the Passing of the Flowers—a fancy dress ball—for the children of their Sabbath school. The committee worked very hard and much credit is due it for the happy passing off of the affair. The little girls were charming in their paper gowns representative of flowers. The following children took part: Fay Herzog, daisy; Gertrude Friend, pansy; Ruth Kroner, carnation; Mariam Ksenky, snow ball; Babette Weil, lilac; Jeanette Mayer, sweet pea; Edna Mayer, sunflower; Elsie Ackerman, corn flowers; Nellie Newmark, forget-me-not; Jessie Newmark, poppies; Hazel Steinberg, violets; Bessie Polwoski, pinks; Polly Berkson, heliotrope; Fanny Nefsky, lilac; Rachel Nefsky, chrysanthemum; Rose Poski, white rose; May Kellner, lilies of the valley; Helen Levy, holly; Dorris Levy,
