DRUGS AND INFORMATION.

(HELEN C. HARWOOD.)

The drug store in the United States has become not only a depository for chemicals, drugs, soda water and postage stamps, but a general directory for various kinds of information. In Europe the chemist's is a place purely for the sale of chemicals or the mixing of drugs. A foreign chemist is perplexed by the broad demands made by Americans upon his shop. Inquiries for postage stamps are a complicated puzzle to him. He lacks the American quickness of perception and fails to see the connection between drugs and stamps. An incident occurred not long ago in one of the suburbs of Lincoln that illustrates how wide are the possibilities of a drug store and how dependent we are upon them in more than one sense of the word. The suburb is some distance from the town. There were a few necessary shops besides a number of houses with a length of lawn. A wedding had been announced and the newspapers wished a report. The address had been lost and the one to whom the interview had been assigned on descending from the train was mystified as to the first step to pursue. A coal and lumber office and a bakery were the only visible means of information. Then down the street the eye suddenly caught a black sign portending "Drug Store." Anxiety faded from the mind. The needed information would not only be forthcoming, in all probability, but the case would be treated with serious courtesy. Inquiries of the wedding in that vicinity were made of a kindly looking man, the proprietor, "Yes," he answered, "I don't know where they live or the names, but I've heard rumors of the kind. Joe," calling to a tall young man with brilliant locks, which he was carefully arranging before a diminutive mirror in the back of the store, "do you know anything about a wedding that is to come off tomorrow morning?" "No," answered "Joe," continuing his occupation. The door slammed, "Good morning, Stephen, heard about that wedding that is due tomorrow morning?" "Yes, of course; it is Anthony Smith's daughter and she is going to marry young Blackman that has just come here from Mason City. You come right out here and I can show you the exact house in which they are going to domicile." The druggist, the man with brilliant locks and the other one followed Stephen into the street, where in the distance he pointed to a freshly painted house of two stories, with tall trees protecting the front. Stephen elongated his finger again. "There," he said emphatically, "is where they are going to domicile."

Hewitt—I sat at the table next to yours at the restaurant yesterday, and I don't see how you could laugh at the table stories that Grewitt was telling.
Jewitt—He was paying for the dinner.

FABLES FOR THE FAIR.

The Woman Who Had Broad Views.

There was once a Woman who held very Broad Views. Of the Views she often Spoke as is the Habit of those who hold them. But though she was Very Advanced, she had her little Plans, just like the Rest of Us. One day she was talking with a Man who was Interested In Her, and therefore, as she thought in her Views. For even Advanced Women make this Mistake occasionally.

"If I were Married," she said, "I should Never for one Moment expect my Husband to confide his Past to me. I should Consider it none of my Business. Nor should I feel that he was Necessarily Immoral if he looked at Any Other Woman but me. For that is Idiotic, Considering that Men are only Human."

The Man Smiled Approvingly. "You are Quite Right," he said. "If more Women were like You, the World would be a Happier Place. But Few are so Broadminded."

"And then," said the Woman, "I should expect the same Tolerance from Him; for Women are only Human, too."

The Man drew away his chair. "I fear," said he somewhat boldly, "that you are Carrying Matters a Little Too Far. The Constitution of Society requires some Foundation. There are Certain Things a Man has a Right to Exact from His Wife."

And he Engaged Himself to a Recent Graduate of a Convent School.

This teaches us that the Broad Road is More than likely to Lead to Destruction.

Jimps—Did you see the college boys in their Latin play?
Jamps—Yes; but I couldn't understand it. It was all Greek to me.

First Pub. June 16-4.

In the district court of Lancaster county, Nebraska. In the matter of the application of George H. Clarke, as executor of the last will and testament of Alonzo Barnes, deceased, for license to sell real estate.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of the said executor, and the proofs offered in support of the same and it appearing therefrom that there is not sufficient personal property of the said estate in the hands of the said executor to pay the legal debts and expenses of the same, and it further appearing that it is necessary and proper that the real estate of said Alonzo Barnes, deceased, should be sold to pay the same, and being fully advised in the premises,

It is ordered and adjudged by me, as judge of the district court, that all persons interested in said estate be and they are hereby directed to be and appear before the judge of the said district court on the 31st day of July, 1900, at nine o'clock, standard time, in the forenoon at the office of the district clerk of Lancaster county, Nebraska, then and there to show cause, if any such there be, why a license should not be granted to said executor to sell real estate of deceased, described in said petition for the purpose of paying the debts and legal expenses of the said estate.

It is further ordered and adjudged that service of this notice be made by publishing the same for four successive weeks in The Courier, a legal newspaper in the said county.

Dated at Lincoln, county of Lancaster, state of Nebraska, this 9th day of June, 1900.
EDWARD P. HOLMES,
Judge of the District Court.
