

in which Mr. Stoner was using. The blow fractured the bone of the lower jaw and the head of the driver cut a deep gash an inch long in the left cheek at the corner of the mouth. The family and friends do not blame Mr. Stoner, for his unfortunately vicious blow. Miss Burnham was standing behind Mr. Stoner when in driving off tee No. 5, in the follow swung his club clear around. He had just had the head of his driver loaded with an extra weight and the club was four ounces heavier than the ordinary driver thus making the blow especially vicious. Miss Burnham was knocked down by the blow, though she did not lose consciousness. She was taken home and Doctor Mitchell attended her, the cut in the face requiring seven stitches. He says the wound will leave no scar. Miss Burnham's accident has cast the first gloom over the links, but happily the accident was not so severe as it might have been. When Robert Braid, the Scotch professional, was here, he was especially emphatic in his insistence that all spectators, caddies and other players should stand well away while anyone was driving. He said that he had seen so many accidents that he always urged people to be further away than was absolutely necessary for safety.
