

money she thought he had made since the train started. The young woman answered that she thought a Pullman car was the place for spending money rather than making it. "Well, in my own case," he said, "I have made two hundred and fifty dollars and I don't know how either." When the lady changed her seat to allow the porter to make up her berth, she told the porter the man was crazy. He replied that the crazy man's folks told him to look after him when they put him on the train but that, they gave him no "encouragement" for any special attention. Everybody knows that porters have to be "encouraged."

MR. JEAN ULRICH, in charge of the new Ladies' Tailoring and Dressmaking departments, received several awards at the World's Fair for design and finish and is the patentee of a high class riding habit. He has had experience with the best houses in Europe, and has been most successful in New York, Newport and Chicago. Our object in incurring the great expense of bringing Mr. Ulrich here is to make it possible for Lincoln people to procure as fine a gown at home as they can anywhere. His vast experience is at your service and no matter what kind of costume you have in view, he will be glad to plan it with you.

Tailor-made gowns, evening gowns, wedding trousseaus, furs, jackets, coats, etc., etc., are all given the greatest care and attention. Charges moderate.

People not residing in the city and who don't find it convenient to come to the store may send a waist that has bent worn, state skirt length and we guarantee a perfect fit in the new gown.

The Confederacy's Dissolution.

"In all Southland there is, perhaps, no more interesting house than is to be seen in the quaint, aristocratic, flowery little town of Washington, in Wilkes county, Georgia," writes Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, of "Romances of Some Southern Homes," in the September Ladies' Home Journal. "It is known far and wide as Heard House, taking its name from Stephen Heard, the first settler of Washington, later a governor of Georgia, who reached there after a long journey from Virginia on New Year's day, 1774. He camped his family on the spot where Heard House now stands, where afterward he built a fort of defense against the Indians. The first dwelling erected on the ground, however, was a wooden structure, known as the Tavern of Captain John Williamson, whose girls were famous Georgia beauties, courted by half the young equires in the state.

"In 1865, just prior to the capture of Jefferson Davis, what is known as the last cabinet meeting of the Confederacy occurred in Heard House. The room in which the discouraged cabinet ministers sat is at the rear of the second story, and has never since been used. For many months what little money the Confederacy had was kept in the old bank vaults on the lower floor. The vault is there today, and is doing duty as a milk and butter closet. Mrs. Mulligan, who at present occupies the house, is a descendant of the original Heard family."

Impressionistic.

"The sky was as bright and beautiful as the great emerald in the czar's diadem—"

"But, my dear, emeralds are green—"
"—in the foreground an opalescent brook threaded its way—"

"Nonsense! Brooks are never opalescent—"

"beneath the shade of a pink tree a green cow stood contentedly chewing her—"

"Tobacco?"

"How do you expect me to read when you interrupt me every minute?"

"Well, what sort of nonsense story are you trying to write, anyway?"

"Why, it is not a story at all, dear, but a description of the prize landscape at the annual exhibition of the Amateur Impressionists' society."—The Mirror.
