Theee early summer days aro trying to the most amiable. Days when the sky is so blue, when the grass is 60 green, and when the scent of apple-blossoms is in the air. Days, too, when the mercury climbs steadily heavenward, when the winds blow the dust in one's eyee, and a feeling of general discomfort is the reault of every excursinn outside of the house. On these occasions nothing is more refreshing to soul and body than a glaes of eoda, phosphate, or some of the other delicious beverages found at Rector's pharmacy. Rector's is more than ever this summer a resort for the tired and thirsty. The front of this attractive store is occupied by pretty girls and propitisting swains at all hours. After the theatre, after a "buggy-ride," after any expedition, Rsctor's is the instant thought. Wagers are settled there, entertainments are planned there, and the young and the old, the grave and the gay, enjoy the coolness, the daintinese, and the attractive, comfortable furnishings to which extensive additions have recently been made.
