LINCOLN GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY,
BURR BLOCK.

Above all else, Lincoln is a city of extremes. Periods of heat and of cold, of sunshine and storm, of gayety and of social inactivity follow each other in bewildering succession. From the dignified, scholarly diversions of commencement week to the paganish din of the Fourth is a single step. In the opening days of June, informal prenuptial breakfasts, dainty luncheons and ceremonious dinners prepared the way for the brilliant weddings which quickly followed. But summer brides and roses have vanished, and tightly-closed blinds and window shades tell the story of desertion, of the annual flitting to the country, the mountains and the seashore. With the few who remain in Lincoln, the social season is ending. Dainty summer toilettes are replaced by kimonoes and collarless shirt waists, while street cars and soda fountains rival in popularity the card parties and elaborate functions of the cooler months. Club workers, too, are taking a vacation, and are turning gladly to Nature for the artistic and musical effects which have been the subject of systematic study during many weeks.

ward assembled at the Fifth Avenue hotel, where a wedding breakfast was served in a private suite. Each of the eight small tables was decorated with a centerpiece of yellow coreopsis. Among those invited to the church and breakfast were Mrs. Jefferson Davis, General and Mrs. Brooks, Governor's Island, General Joseph Wheeler, Miss Wheeler, Mrs. Charles Humphrey, the Misses Humphrey, Miss Josephine Roe, Mrs. Heintzelman, Miss Cornelia Knox, Miss Mai Angeline Coleman and Mrs. Nelson Page of Washington, Miss Brandreth, Mr. and Mrs. M. Butler Hilner and Mr. John Crane of Elizabeth, N. J.; Miss Virginia Lee, sister of the bride; Mr. George Mason Lee, brother; Mr. George D. Fowle, Dr. George Bolling Lee, Dr. Conover Field, Dr. H. W. Terriberry, Mrs. Wharton, Mrs. Gillot and Miss Gillot. Lieutenant Rhea is a son of Mr. J. B. Rhea of Midland, Texas. The young couple will leave New York in a few days for Cuba, where the bridegroom is stationed.

Married, Miss Ellen Fowle Lee, daughter of Brigadier-General Fitzhugh Lee, U.S.A., to First Lieutenant James Cooper Rhea of the Seventh cavalry, U. S.A., at noon on Thursday, June 29, in the Church of the Transfiguration in New York city. No formal invitations were issued, the wedding guests having been invited verbally. The chancel of "The Little Church Around the Corner" was quite large enough to accommodate the bridal party. There were groups of palms on either side of the altar. The ushers, in full dress cavalry uniform, classmates of the bridegroom, were Lieutenant William P. Wooten of the engineer corps, Clifton C. Carter of the artillery corps, Pierce C. Murphy, Second United States cavalry, and John Dudley Long, Twelfth United States cavalry. The bride's father gave her away. She wore a gown of white hoosi cloth, sent from the Philippines for the occasion. It was made over white satin, the skirt and bodice made with small knife pleatings and trimmed with white satin ribbons. Her veil was of tulle and was held in place with a small cluster of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of white sweet peas. Miss Anne Fitzhugh Lee, sister of the bride, who was the maid of honor, wore white organdie with insertions of lace, over white taffeta, and trimmed with yellow satin ribbons. She wore a large black chiffon hat, trimmed with black ostrich plumes. Her bouquet was of yellow coreopsis, to match the color of the cavalry. There were no bridesmaids. Lieutenant Evan Harris Humphrey of the Seventh cavalry, attended the bridegroom as best man. Both men wore full dress uniforms. Mrs. Lee's costume was of gray crepe de chine over pink silk, and a small boanet of steel, with white and pink roses. An unconventional incident as the young couple descended from the chancel steps was much enjoyed by the guests. As the bride arrived at the pew occupied by her father and mother, she embraced them, and just at the same moment Mrs. Jefferson Davis, from a pew on the opposite side of the aisle, came forward and warmly embraced the bride. There was no formal reception, but the few relatives and intimate friends after-

After delivering a chautauqua address at David City, Congressman Charles B. Landis of Indiana visited Congressman Burkett in Lincoln on Wednesday. After driving about the city, Mr. Burkett gave a luncheon to his guest at the Lincoln hotel. The guests were: Governor Savage, Messrs. G. M. Lambertson, J. B. Strode, E. R. Sizer, William Clark, G. E. Tobey, T. C. Munger, W. O. Jones, R. J. Greenlee, P. F. Greene and A. G. Greenlee.
