M'NAY MONUMENT.

Porphyritic Stone Will Mark the Family Burial Lot in Wyuka.

Kimball Bros. have just sold to Dr. John S. McNay a family monument which is to be erected in Wyuka as soon as completed, and which is the only one of the kind thus far placed in that cemetery. The stone is known to the trade as Montello porphyry and is the same as was selected for the sarcophagus of General Grant. It is three times as hard as granite, withstands more pressure than any other rock, and takes a mirror like polish. The McNay monument will stand in the center of the family lot in Wyuka. The only inscription for the present will be that of an only child, Howard Littleton McNay, born February 17, 1883, died March 17, 1901, a most promising former student of the high school, whose early and untimely death is deeply deplored by all who knew him.

The extreme difficulty in working the stone is such that it will be several months before the monument will be in position. Montello porphyry has during recent years been coming more and more into use for monuments in the United States, though as yet it is only to be seen in the larger cemeteries.

Hurrah for the Flag.

It is well worth noting that in Havana this year to date there has not been a single death from yellow fever, the hitherto dread scourge of the Antilles, says the Fremont Tribune. This is owing solely to the magic touch of American energy and skill. The causes of yellow fever have been removed. Everywhere the flag goes it carries beneficent wisdom and generous freedom.
