THE SPOTTED BRONCHO.

(Walt Mason, in Ainslee's Magazine.)
 "Stranger, let me sell you a hoss. I'll give you such a bargain you'll talk about it all your born days."
 The speaker, a tall, melancholy man in ragged garments, was leaning against the wheel of his canvas-covered wagon. His horses were lariatd on the roadside, cropping the dusty grass. Several sore-footed, lean dogs lay under the wagon, panting. The canvas of the vehicle was closely drawn, and from within came the sound of moaning and sobbing.
 The stranger alighted from his buggy and cast a knowing glance over the weary, bony horses.
 "Which hoss d'ye want to sell?" he asked.

"The spotted one; and a better chunk of hossflesh wasn't ever done up in hide. Sure, he looks a little tough now; been on the road all the way from Oklahoma, and mighty little grain for him. But he's sound as a bullet and'll work any place you put him; single or double, don't make no difference. Hate to part with him, and that's a fact. Got to, though."

"He's curbed in that off hind leg."
 "Just a little. Don't hurt him none. You can blister that curb off in ten days."

"He's too long in the back to suit me."
 "Any hoss looks long-jinted when he's poor. Tell you, stranger, if it wasn't for hard luck, fifty dollars wouldn't touch him. I've got to have money."

"Who's cryin' in that wagon?"
 "The woman. Gimme fifteen dollars for the pony and he's yours."

"I'll give you ten. That more'n he's wuth; he's old enough to vote, and he's bunged up in front, and no good anywhere. But he's an odd lookin' critter with them black and white spots, and I'd like to have him for my boy. I'd like to have him ten dollars wuth; no more— Say, what's that woman in there takin' on so for?"

"She's in trouble— I'll split the difference, stranger; gimme twelve and a half and take the hoss. In a week you won't take fifty for him. I got to have the money, that's why I sell."

"I won't give more'n ten; but say, that woman must be sufferin' awful. What is the matter?"

"Come and see."
 He pulled the canvas apart at the rear end of the wagon, and stepped aside that the stranger might look in. A woman was weeping and wringing her hands over a child's form lying on a pile of horse blankets. The face of the child was drawn and white, but peaceful. The woman looked at the stranger with stony, unseeing eyes, and wailed. The stranger stepped back reverently and closed the canvas.

"Poor thing!" he whispered. "How long has the child been dead?"

"Two hours," said the melancholy man, in a broken voice. "The last of three; they all died on the road. I want to buy—a coffin—"

"I sorter think," said the stranger, choking slightly, "I sorter think that spotted broncho is just what my boy needs. Twenty-five dollars was your price, wasn't it? Well, I've sold a lot of hogs today, and I guess I can afford it. Here's your money. I'll just lead the blamed beast home behind my buggy. So long."

Canker Sore Mouth Cured.

LINCOLN, NEBR., July 7, 1901.
 Editor Courier: This is to certify that I have been under the care of the British Doctors for two months, and I now can say that I am perfectly cured. I suffered from canker sore mouth for a number of months and as a consequence my system was run down and I felt much disheartened. I now feel perfectly well and thank the Doctors for their courteous treatment.

news, golf news, yachting news—all the sporting news—is given with the degree of fullness and interest to be expected of the newspaper which combines the very complete facilities of those two great metropolitan newspapers, The Chicago Record and The Chicago Times-Herald. The sporting page of the daily issue is also exceptionally popular—a self-evident fact to those who have noted the general vogue of The Chicago Record-Herald among sportsmen.

Exactly as Advertised.

An indignant farmer returned to a horse dealer's about an hour after purchasing a horse.

"Look here, sir!" he exclaimed, "I don't want this horse you sold me! He shies, I can't get him to cross the bridge!"

"That's the reason I sold him," said the dealer calmly. "Why did you come to me for the horse?"

"I saw your advertisement in the paper."

"I thought so. I gave my reason for selling him."

"Yes; to be sold, you stated, for no other reason than that the owner wanted to go out of town."

"Well, if you can get out of town with him," said the dealer, "it will be more than I can do."—London Answers.
