A BENEVOLENT ENTERPRISE.

Is the British Medical Institute Corner 11th and N Streets, Sheldon Block It Gives Three Months' Services Free to All Invalids who Call Upon Them Before October 10.

A staff of eminent physicians and surgeons from the British Medical Institute, at the urgent solicitation of a large number of patients under their care in this country, have established a permanent branch of the Institute in this city, at the office, corner of Eleventh and N streets, in the Sheldon block. These eminent gentlemen have decided to give their services entirely free for three months (medicines excepted) to all invalids who call upon them for treatment between now and Oct. 10th. These services will not only consist of consultation, examination and advice, but also of all minor surgical operations. The object in pursuing this course is to become rapidly and personally acquainted with the sick and afflicted, and under no condition will any charge whatever be made for any services rendered for three months to all who call before Oct. 10th.

The doctors treat all forms of disease and deformities, and guarantee a cure in every case they undertake. At the first interview a thorough examination is made; and, if incurable, you are frankly and kindly told so; also advised against spending your money for useless treatment. Male and female weakness, catarrh and catarrhal deafness, also rupture, goitre, cancer, all skin diseases and all diseases of the rectum are positively cured by their new treatment.

The chief associate surgeon of the Institute, assisted by one or more of his staff associates, is in personal charge. Office hours from 9 a. m. till 8 p. m. No Sunday hours.

Special Notice—If you cannot call send stamp for question blank for home treatment.

Better If He Had.

Coming home rather late one night old Jones discovered a country bumpkin standing by the kitchen door.

"Young man," said he, "what are you doing here?"

"I've come a courting, sur."

"A courting? What do you mean?"

"Well, I'm a follerer of Mary, the kitchen maid, sur."

"Do you usually carry a lantern when you are on such errands?" asked the old man, sarcastically.

"Yes, sur, al'ays."

"Don't tell me such nonsense. You had better be off quickly—courting with a lantern, indeed. In my young days I never used such a thing."

"No, sur," replied the bumpkin sidling off; "judging by ye missus, I shouldn't think yer did."—Leslie's Weekly.

A Chicago lady, upon engaging a new cook, was very careful to impress upon her that no followers were allowed at that establishment, and added that the last cook had been discharged through breaking that rule. Shortly afterward, suspecting that all was not right in the culinary department, she paid a surprise visit to the kitchen, and upon making a tour of inspection, was astounded to find a fine specimen of the genus Atkins standing bolt upright in a cupboard.

"Bridget! what is this man doing here?"

"Faix, ma'am, he must have been left there by your last cook," said Bridget.

"Always," said the astute city editor to the new reporter—"always be on the lookout for any little bit of humor that may brighten up your columns." That evening the new reporter turned in a story about a burglary in a butcher shop, which commenced: "Mr. Hiram Cleaver, the well known butcher, is losing flesh rapidly these days."—Baltimore American.

Social Business Men.

In a paper on "Mid Air Dining Clubs," in the September Century, Cleveland Moffett has something to say of their effect upon the sociability of business men.

They are developing among New York business men a new kind of sociability. With the old restaurant regime the members of a certain business house or office found small variety at luncheon time from the monotony of their narrow round. Day after day the same little groups would go out together and return together, seldom meeting new men, seldom getting out of the deep worn channels of thought and talk. It was astonishing how few acquaintances they made in years of this life. New York has a terrible conservatism that walls men about and keeps them apart from their fellow-men unless something comes to break through it. In this case the mid-air club came, and straightway scores of men who were strangers, though in similar lines of effort, were brought into friendly relations, to their mutual pleasure and profit. Rivals in many enterprises, enemies in trade, merchants, importers, manufacturers, jobbers, have met in some mid-air smoking room day after day, and somehow, between the soothing of a good cigar and the wonderful view, have come into better understanding. Nor can any one say how many deals have gone through by the friendly mediation of a mid-air meal together in one of these favorite corners, where the boats pass, or what troublesome business tangles have untangled themselves through the magic of an after dinner coffee, with the breeze blowing in. It is hard for a man to be petty or mean or to higgler for trifles with the majesty of these patient rivers bearing in on him. These are the business advantages I mentioned, and experience has shown that they are very real.

Among the latest political fashions is a design for a thinking cap which is becoming very popular with intelligent democrats. It is said that the result of wearing this useful article will become apparent in November when their voters will put another feather in the republican prosperity cap. About the same time the democratic rainy-day skirt will be made of sack cloth.—New Lexington (Ohio) Tribune.

"Supposing I give you your supper," said the tired-looking woman; "what will you do to earn it?"

"Madam," said Meandering Mike, "I'll give you de opportunity of seein' a man got t'roo a whole meal wit'out findin' fault wit' a single t'ing."

The woman thought a minute and then told him to come in and she'd set the table.—Washington Star.

One of the first things to attract the attention of Baby Clarence was grandma's hatrack, made of a pair of deer horns. One afternoon, when he was three years old, papa took him to a park. When relating the incidents of his trip to his mamma on their return, he exclaimed: "And, oh, mamma! I saw a deer, and he had a hatrack on his head."—Detroit Free Press.
