

The marriage of Miss Grace M. Bowen of Avoca, Iowa to Mr. Fred R. Easterday of this city, was celebrated Thursday evening in the Presbyterian church at Avoca. Mrs. L. F. M. Easterday, mother of the groom, and Mr. Phil R. Easterday, his brother, who was best man at the wedding, left Wednesday evening to attend the nuptials.

Beta chapter of Delta Tau Delta gave its eighth annual banquet Saturday evening at the Lincoln. A large number of active and alumni members was present. Mr. E. C. Strode was toastmaster and Messieurs C. H. Gordon, J. L. Teeters, Frank Woodland and F. J. Kelley were among the speakers.

Mrs. S. D. Hyde, assisted by Mesdames Schaupp, Huff and Tingley, entertained the kensington of the First Baptist church Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Hyde's home. Professor Barrett, a former principal of the high school, and Mrs. Barrett, of Washington, were honored guests. Seventy-five persons were present, many ladies who do not usually attend the kensington being present. Delicate refreshments were served.

"Well, I see that England has made amicable arrangements with Japan."
"Yes, it shows a strong desire for peace. I wouldn't be surprised next if she made overtures to Rudyard Kipling."—Town Topics.

Harry—I wish I'd had my hair cut last week.
Dick—Won't you have time to get it cut this week?

Harry—That isn't the question. I've got an awful cold in my head and if I had had my hair cut last week I should know what to lay it to.—Boston Transcript.

Master George Pollock, chief master of the supreme court of judicature, having reached the age of eighty-one, has resigned the office which he held for over fifty years. For the last fifteen years he had been queen's and then king's remembrancer as well. He is the second son of the late Lord Chief Baron Pollock, and uncle of the present baronet, Sir Frederick Pollock, the writer on early law. The Pollocks were well provided with fat judicial places by their father;

three of the sons were made masters in chancery, with salaries of $7,500 a year, and a fourth son was Sir Charles Pollock, the last of the barons of the exchequer. George Pollock has been in the habit of riding to his office on a bicycle.

CRAZE OF PING PONG CROSSES THE ATLANTIC

A GAME OF PING PONG IN LONDON SOCIETY.

Is America going to have the Ping Pong craze which at present affects England? Present indications seem to point to an affirmative reply to this question. The game has already taken a phenomenal hold in this country and Ping Pong tables are now properly installed in thousands of homes throughout the country. As yet the game (which is a table adaptation of tennis) is being adopted here within the bounds of sanity. Not so in England, where society seems to have given itself heart and soul to the fad. One famous British magazine writer has upbraidingly declared that Ping Pong is at present of more moment to the average Englishman than the progress of the war in South Africa.
