Strongest of Heart Tonics

One of the newest, most important and most expensive drugs on earth is adrenalin.

Those who are not physicians will be first interested in learning that adrenalin costs 50 cents a grain—that is, $7,000 a pound.

Adrenalin is the most powerful astringent, hemostatic, and heart tonic known. If you do not know what an astringent is, bite an unripe pomegranate. Its astringent effect will pucker up your mouth.

Just so adrenalin puckers up the walls of the smaller blood vessels so that blood cannot flow from them even if their ends were severed.

Since this costly drug closes and contracts the arteries, even when they are cut by the surgeon's knife, it is most valuable in all forms of hemorrhage. But it has another great and all-important use. Experiments have proved that it is a most powerful heart stimulant.

It will bring back to life a heart that is being killed by chloroform.

Chloroform, though quick in its action, is dangerous, but must often be used, when every moment is valuable, where there are many patients, as in military hospitals in war times.

So, if chloroform is necessary, it is of the greatest possible value that adrenalin can be injected into a vein and prevent such heart failure as an overdose of chloroform often produces. This action of adrenalin has been proved by many experiments.—New York Daily News.
