the arrangement of a Hallowe'en supper table, which is both novel and appropriate. A grinning Jack-o'-Lantern forms the centerpiece, scooped out cabbage shells, the red preferred, are used for fruit dishes, turnip shells make admirable nut bowls, a cocoanut shell holds the marshmallows, and carrots are converted into ideal candlesticks. The cider should be served from a tall crystal pitcher and the fried cakes on a standard dish.

The concert given Tuesday evening by the Steckelberg concert company at Grace Lutheran church was of a high order, and was heard by a fair sized audience, which showed its appreciation by demanding an encore after every number. Mr. Carl Steckelberg, who is at the head of the company, is a gifted young man who, by combining hard work with unusual talent has made for himself a place in the front rank of young violinists. He is both scholarly and poetic, and has temperament to a marked degree. Madam Myron, the contraalto singer with the company has a voice of great range and volume, and has a charming stage presence. Her singing of O Don Fatale was most satisfactory.

Adam—I wish I hadn't eaten that apple. I don't mind a fall, but ever since you've been complaining that you hadn't a thing to wear.—Town Topics.

Employer—Great Scott! Keep away, sir! Don't bite me! Wh-what do you mean by coming here, sir, when you wrote and begged a day or two off because you had the rabies?

Clerk—Eh? Oh, I see! Quite a mistake—I do write my b's like r's. It was babies I alluded to, sir—new twins, sir.—Boston Globe.

Benevolent Old Man (pointing a moral to village school children)—Now, why do I take all the trouble to leave my house and come over here and speak to you thus? Can any boy tell me?

Bright Child (innocently)—Please, sir, it's because ye like to hear yersel' talk—Tit-Bits.
