

Quilted petticoats have come in fashion again, and those of Japanese silk, which are so light and yet so warm, are found to serve just the need of the fair motorists. With this introduction or return of favor, quilted garments in general seem to be accepted. There are jackets which are always a comfort for invalids, or suitable as morning wraps for any chilly persons when the house is cold. Whole quilted gowns are nowadays well shaped and in rich colors. Elaborate embroideries are used with most of those, and trails of silken flowers all down the fronts, on collar, cuffs and pockets, make this a decorative as it is a cosy garment.
