

What Sulphur Does

For the Human Body in Health and Disease

The mention of sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our mothers gave us our daily dose of sulphur and molasses every spring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium (Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly in the liver, and excretory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers knew this when they dosed us with sulphur and molasses every spring and fall, but the crudity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and can not compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and purify the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria, I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers. In patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-seated carbuncles, I have repeatedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and sold by druggists, and for that reason tabooed by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation, liver and kidney troubles and especially in all forms of skin disease as this remedy."

At any rate people who are tired of pills, cathartics and so-called blood "purifiers," will find in Stuart's Calcium Wafers, a far safer, more palatable and effective preparation.

The Same Old Bunco Game

Republican statesmen returning to Washington are somewhat freely expressing themselves on the subject of tariff revision. The latest interviews to appear are of exceptional significance. One is from Speaker Cannon of the house and the other from Senator Hale, who is a man of some influence in the senate—Mr. Cannon coming from the west, where tariff reform sentiment within the party is supposed to be strong, and Mr. Hale from New England, where the sentiment is stronger than anywhere else in the northeast, says the Springfield Republican.

And both of them point to the election in proof that the country does not want any tariff revision. Says Mr. Cannon:

"The people seemed to indicate with an unprecedented emphasis that they were satisfied with present conditions of affairs in the country. Business stability, a continuation of prosperity and of the fiscal policies that make such prosperity possible—certainly these were issues in the campaign, and the voice of the voters was unmistakable."

Mr. Hale is even more emphatic on this point:

"The lessons of the election are plain enough to read. The position of the party upon three great issues—the protective tariff, the currency and the handling of overgrown, dictatorial and oppressive trusts—was simply impregnable. Every attack by the Democrats upon these positions met with disgraceful defeat, and when the American people woke up on the morning after the election and knew its results, they had a right to expect, and to assume, that the policy of the party upon these three great questions had been settled and would be so considered during the next four years of administration."

Accordingly he does not expect to see any movement on the part of the administration "either for tariff revision or for any form of reciprocity." He does not believe the President will do anything to weaken or disrupt the party, "and any attempt at tariff revision will certainly do both." More than this, any attempt at tariff revision will profoundly disturb business and destroy prosperity.

"We can have no partial or piecemeal revision of the tariff. Whenever it is undertaken it will go to the bottom. Should the President follow the advice of the few revisionists who are now making so much noise he will at once find two things before him. First, the democratic party will be solidly with him, clamoring for revision and for all the free trade it can get out of it. Secondly, he will find facing him a divided party, with the most of its leaders and the great masses of the people bitterly hostile to any such move. There is not an industry in the country that would not be alarmed, and the uncertainty which would forthwith set in would halt and cripple labor and its results everywhere."

And so Mr. Hale emphatically expresses the belief that no movement will be made for revision of any sort "either at this session or in the next congress."

It will be recalled that the attitude taken by these and other party leaders in the campaign was that they could be trusted to revise the tariff when and where needed, and that revision should be left with its friends and not allowed to slip away into the hands of its enemies. That was before election; and now that the people have trusted them and voted to continue them in power, they turn around and declare that the vote is against any revision whatever—that a question which they presented as an open one before election has been closed by the very verdict which they invited by a pretense of open-mindedness.

Here, then, we have a familiar deception, a familiar old fraud, continues the Republican. And if the reasoning of Messrs. Hale and Cannon and the other stand-patters is to be accepted as sound, when will it ever be possible to have tariff revision from the tariff's friends? If whenever the people vote to trust revision to the friends, the latter are always to accept the vote as a popular verdict against any revision, what remains of the possibility of ever having a friendly revision? Will Mr. Hale or Mr. Cannon please inform an interested people on this point? They present the friendly revision as an obvious farce and fraud, and such, in fact, it has so far proved to be throughout

Diverting Immigration

People who live in large cities will look upon this endeavor to distribute immigrants in the rural sections not as a mere industrial undertaking, but as probably the most valuable of all charitable endeavors. The present evil conditions of city life, largely brought about by congestion in slums whose members subsist on doles from the charitable, while rural communities are clamoring for workers, are as mischievous as they are amazing.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.
