A Cleveland, Ohio, dispatch follows: "Mayor Johnson's three-cent fare street railway won a big victory today by the decision of Judge Beacom in the common pleas court. For two months the Cleveland Electric railway has been trying by every means possible to prevent the low-fare company from running its track through Franklin Circle, a small park which is planned to be the centering point of all the new railway's west side lines. The mayor's company was first enjoined from using the streets leading to the park but the mayor won in court and the injunctions were lifted. Then application was made for an injunction to prevent the new company from building through the park, but Judge Beacom's decision nullifies this proceeding. The mayor had a large force of workmen on hand, who began excavations in the park as soon as the decision was handed down before any further obstacles could be placed in the way."

ASTONISHED THE NATIVES

Harry Bulger tells the following story at the expense of a New York theatrical manager to whom he was under contract not so many seasons ago:

"We were engaged one morning testing voices for a summer production, the manager, musical director and myself; there was a rather long line and all looking for positions in the chorus, and nearly every voice was below the standard, which was very disappointing, and the manager got to be very irritable as we got to the last of the applicants, who was a very melancholy looking man. As he came to the piano he attempted to make some remark, but was promptly cut short by the manager, who said: "You will omit all preliminary remarks and get down to business! Try him," he added, turning to the director.

"The latter began the accompaniment to a popular song, which, with some hesitancy, the applicant for a job attempted with what voice he had. His effort was about as bad as it could have been.

"Look here!" cut in the manager, after the singer had cleared his throat for a second verse, 'that will do! You actually have the nerve to ask me for a job?'

"Certainly," replied the sad one in an injured tone.

"Why man, you can't sing a little bit!"

"I don't claim to be able to sing," calmly responded the man, 'and I don't want to sing. I am a stage carpenter. I was only singing to please you people—you seemed to be set on it.'"

SERMON BY TELEPHONE

The Rev. George C. Houghton, pastor of the Little Church Around the Corner, in West Twenty-ninth street, whither Cupid has led so many couples, is determined that all in his church shall be able to hear his sermons. Hence he has installed aurophones in the pews.

Hanging to hooks on the backs of the pews yesterday were small receivers which can be concealed in the palm of the hand. They are connected by hidden wires with a transmitter in the pulpit, and caught every word the clergyman uttered, even to his low tones.

Those who have heretofore had difficulty in catching the sermon were able with ease to hear that of yesterday by using the instruments. In Dr. Houghton's church are several members afflicted with deafness. A Mrs. Murphy, who has a pew in a distant part of the church, declared yesterday that she had heard the sermon throughout for the first time in years.

The aurophone, it is said, is to be introduced in a number of other city churches and attuned to suit the acoustic properties.—New York American.

Why

Don't you give your heart the same chance you do the other organs?

Why? Because when any other organ is in trouble, it refuses to work, and you hasten to repair it.

The heart, the ever faithful servant, never refuses as long as it has power to move, but continues to do the best it can, getting weaker and weaker, until it is past repair, and then stops. It is just as sick as the other organs, but because it will work you let it.

However, it's not too late for a "change of heart," so remember

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure

will give your heart strength and vitality to overcome Dizziness, Palpitation, Short Breath, Faint Spells, Pains in Heart and Side, and all other Heart aches and difficulties.

"My heart would ache and palpitate terribly, and at times I could hardly breathe. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure has restored me to perfect health, and I am very grateful."
