What a Commoner Reader Says About These Books
Huntington, W. Va., June 20, 1910.—The Commoner, Lincoln, Neb.—Gentlemen: I am in receipt of the set of books and desire to say they are rare gems indeed. I am so pleased with them that I have decided to enlist again in the club of four. I will in the next ten days send you a club list of four subscribers to The Commoner, as I want these for my married daughter. I wish very much that I could get a set for each of my five children. I don't want you to think for one minute that I consider the set of books all there is to the subscription for I can assure you that I regard The Commoner the best journal published today. I get more real good out of it than any paper I read. I am a genuine Bryan man; have voted for him three times and am ready to vote that many times over. Hurrah for Bryan and The Commoner.

Yours truly, C. S. MCKENZIE.

MASTERPIECES OF THE WORLD'S BEST LITERATURE

Join the Commoner's One Thousand Club

From one of the large New York book publishing houses, The Commoner had an opportunity to secure just 1,000 sets of the famous library, "Masterpieces of the World's Best Literature," edited by Jeanette L. Gilder. The proposition which they made enabled us to give them in exchange for subscriptions to The Commoner, provided we formed a club that enabled us to take the whole lot of 1,000 sets. Only a few of these sets yet remain. Now is your last opportunity to get them.

WILL YOU JOIN OUR CLUB AND HELP US DO IT?
This extraordinary opportunity of securing this set of books and the rack that goes with each set was so liberal that this small club will very soon be filled from the large list of Commoner readers. It is, therefore, well to remember that the offer is limited, and that it will be necessary to act promptly if you want a set. But a few sets yet remain.
