

Scanning the Sportscope

BY JIM EVINGER.

Early returns for this week found Nebraska's George Seemann a leading candidate for an end position in the nation wide poll to select an all star college football —Journal and Star.

GEORGE SEEMANN

Others in the midwest sector receiving strong support are Iowa's Nile Kinnick, Oklahoma's Frank Ivy and Beryl Clark, Purdue's Lou Brock, and Joe Thesing of Notre Dame.

Political notice: one George W. Norris, Grinnell, Ia., was named assistant coach at Cedar Falls high school in Iowa. . . No, he is not Nebraska's senior solon.

DiMaggio is rapidly becoming a feared name in both major leagues. . . Joe, the Yankee Clipper, is the recognized "menace" of American league pitching. . . Young brother Dominic is coming thru with some timely hitting for the Bosox.

While over in the senior circuit, older brother Vince is setting a fast pace for the Pirates. . . After being traded from the Cincinnati

Ferguson sends bulletin

The College of Engineering, under Dean O. J. Ferguson, will send out some 2,800 copies of its 29th annual news letter to graduates and former students of the college this week.

Reds, Vince began slamming the ball into the upper tiers and out of the parks in many National league parks.

Vince has broken into the two numbered column in hitting homers. . . Last year, with the Kansas City Blues, Vince went wild with his hitting for the distance and led the Association in that department. . . Now he's back in form again.

Ed Oliver, the golfer who was disqualified from a three way tie in the national open, has drawn more attention from not being able to play in the final playoff than he probably would have if he had played and then lost. . . A martyr in the sport world often becomes a hero.

"The Angel," or Mons. Maurice Tillet, was discovered in far off Singapore by a former wrestler. . . This modern Neanderthal creature has dimensions abnormal in size. . . Frinstance, his skull is 75 percent thicker than normal and his ribs are three times as large as the next man's.

proved that it is generally more expensive to keep a colony than warrants the return received from it. Italy's conquest of Ethiopia is a good example of the fallacy that colonies are a good outlet for surplus population because the Italians simply haven't settled there. Formerly there might have been some reason for colonies for Great Britain. In America there was a duplicate of climatic conditions coupled with many opportunities.

Roosevelt—impossible.

Turning to the present political situation and the third term for Roosevelt Hudgins exclaimed, "I just can't conceive of it." He believed that either Farley or Hull would be able to run a good campaign against Willkie.

"Wayne university is the largest municipal university in the country," proudly explained Hudgins, "and the seventeenth largest of all universities." Hudgins joined the faculty right after the World war and has been there ever since.

Publish transportation conference proceedings

Proceedings of the second annual transportation conference held at the university April 15, 1940, under the auspices of the bizad college, have been published in a booklet, "Coordination in Transportation." Some 200 copies have been issued to conference members and other subscribers including traffic managers of many major business firms of the country, according to Prof. Clifford M. Hicks, chairman of the committee in charge of the conference. About 100 copies remain to be distributed and may be had for a nominal charge by addressing the college of business administration office.
