

Women live in luxury—reasonably

Open for occupancy during the summer school, the residence halls for women will offer accommodations for the short session for $33, and $44 for the long session. A limited number of rooms will also be available in co-operative dormitories at $11 for the short term, and $16 for the long session per person. In the residence halls for women, two girls will share a room. Cost will include room and two meals every day except Saturday and Sunday. Single rooms can be secured at a special rate. For $2.50, the residence halls will furnish linen, blankets, and spreads. Students may supply their own.

Beggs plans clinics involving educational problems of state

Teachers and administrators attending the university's 1941 summer school will have an opportunity to analyze and discuss some of the state's major educational problems in a series of seven administrative clinics being planned by Dr. W. K. Beggs. Originated in 1939, the clinics are designed to bring students of education into a cooperative analysis of teaching techniques and devices, administrative problems and outstanding movements in the educational world. In general this year's clinics are directed toward a better coordination of state educational agencies.

On June 13 the first clinic will take up "WPA's Contribution to Nebraska Education." In regard to this symposium Dr. Beggs says, "Considerable confusion has developed among educators and laymen alike as to the basic purpose of the federal agency. Some feel that it constitutes a danger in setting up a parallel system of education in competition with the public schools. Others feel that it is only temporary and will be dropped gradually as its need expires."

WPA officials appear

A third group argues that the service rendered is valuable and that WPA can become a profitable cooperating agency with public schools, especially in such fields as adult education, recreation, health, service, music, and related fields. This clinic will bring WPA officials and school people into a cooperative examination of these viewpoints in an effort to work out a cooperative plan of attack on educational problems of the state.

The second clinic on June 17 will consider "NYA—A Work Program for Needy Youth." This meeting will consider the extensive out-of-school youth program carried on by the NYA along with its program for needy youth in the schools. A symposium of NYA officials will state the policy and briefly explain the main points of their program. The audience will then be allowed to ask questions for further information. Nothing official in the way of conclusions can be reached at these meetings, Dr. Beggs explains, but their value will lie in providing a better understanding between educators and these federal agencies.

"The Effective Use of Available Audio-Visual Aids" is the subject of a clinic on June 24 which will discuss the problem of small schools in utilizing effectively and economically the wide variety of technical equipment which has been developed to visualize education through pictures and sound. An all-day exhibit will be set up by commercial firms and a demonstration panel discussion will be held.

On July 1 a clinic is planned on "A Functional In-Service Training Program" to take up agencies and devices developed by the university through its teachers college and extension division. The university will point out how it can give assistance in interpreting teachers' problems, in securing instructional materials, and in promoting professional growth. Administrators and teachers will be able to point out needs that are not being met and possible new services needed.

Consider state honors convo

"Ways and Means to Better Articulation of Nebraska Secondary Schools and Institutions of Higher Learning" is the topic set for July 8. Questions will be analyzed at this clinic in an effort to point a way to a better understanding of mutual problems of the two groups and the possibilities of a state high school honors convocation will be considered.

A clinic on July 15 will discuss "National Teachers Examinations and Their Effectiveness for Nebraska Teachers." Development of such examinations has been sponsored by the American Council on Education with standardizations and norms to enable school administrators to secure a comparative rating of prospective teachers thru their test scores. Advantages and limitations of this type of examination will be called to the attention of Nebraska school people.

The closing clinic on July 22 is planned to consider "Teacher Selection and Placement Problems of 1941." Ethics involved in applying for a position, the rapid turnover from year to year, the experienced vs. the inexperienced teacher are some of the subjects which should interest educators. A new angle may enter the discussions in the question of whether supply will continue to exceed demand in 1941 as has been the case for the last ten years.

ing staff. They will spend their time in individual conferences or study, small group meetings, and seminars.

Groups take individual problems.

Those interested in the same problem will work together and each group will have a leader to be known as a Workshop Fellow. This leader will be selected by the staff on the basis of previous interest and work on the selected problem. At least once each week all participants will meet together to share their findings and discuss problems of general interest.

Members of the workshop will have access to the university library curriculum laboratory, the psychological laboratory, a special library for the small school, and the collection of research materials which have been produced by graduate students.

Hold field trips.

Field trips will be arranged for those who wish to visit points of interest such as places of historical significance, conservation districts, new power projects, and CCC camps. Special luncheons also can be arranged each day in the Union for the workshop group.

Registration for the workshop may be made in advance, in person or by mail. Upon request to Dr. Sorenson, an advance registration blank will be sent to any person interested. All participants will complete their registration on June 9 and 10 at the university. Fees are the same as for regular course work.
